MRS. RANTOUL CONFESSED LOVE

TESTIFIES OF KISSES GIVEN BY RUMRILL

Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, testifying today in her fight in the East Cambridge Court to prevent her husband, Edward L. Rantoul, winning sole custody of their two daughters, told how she confessed to her husband her love for Chester Chapin Rumrill.

She described a conversation between herself, her husband and Rumrill when the discussed the "intellectual love triangle" in which they were involved.

She admitted Rumrill kissed her, and told of gifts he had given her, ranging in value from silk stockings to diamond earrings.

She testified that her husband called her many names and that he spit in her face. She said that she paid all the children's expenses and her own while living with Mr. Rantoul. She said she "deceived her husband absolutely" as to some diamond earrings Mr. Rumrill had given her, telling Mr. Rantoul they were false.

She testified to other trips she had taken in his company or on which

VAST WAR STROKE BY ALLIES

ATHENS, Nov. 30.—Strongly reinforced in men and artillery, the Bulgarians in Southern Serbia have resumed their offensive operations against the Anglo-French forces. French troops have had to evacuate positions on the mouth bank of the Cerna River, according to reports received today, the Bulgarians crossing the stream under the protection of their artillery.

By PERCY THOMAS.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Though heavy snow storms have caused a lull in active operations in most of the war theatres, military plans are being consummated in London and Paris that are of more importance as regards the future of Europe than any that have hitherto been drafted.

There is more than a possibility that the great British army in France will be utilized in another war theatre.

Sir John French, commander-in-chief, was in London yesterday and conferred with Premier Asquith. The customary secrecy attended the conference, but men in the confidence of the British field marshal assert he is convinced that the French army is now capable of dealing with any offensive that the Germans may launch in the western front, and they believe he has informed his government that the main British forces could be used elsewhere to better advantage.

The belief has been growing in London for weeks that the Balkans would prove the decisive battle ground of the great war. To assure victory there against the Teutons, Bulgarians and Turks, it would be necessary to pour in armies of vast strength, not mere expeditionary forces.

WOULD SOLVE PROBLEM.

These armies would have to come from British sources. With the French army holding the Germans in the West, and the reorganized Russians once more well supplied with munitions on the offensive in the East, the logical place for the Brit-

LAY PLANS FOR XMAS FUND BALL

The Christmas Basket Fund, swelled by a substantial sum as a result of the doll auction at the Hotel Georgian after the theatre last night, received promise of further increase through the meeting in the old aldermanic chamber at City Hall today when Mayor Curley appealed to the charitable organizations of Boston to unite in support of a great charity ball, the proceeds to go to the Christmas Cheer funds of Boston.

The doll auction last night was a gay and striking success. Theatrical folk by the dozen attended the auction, and the dolls, each one dressed by some star of the stage or the opera, brought splendid prices. In all $460 was realized.

Frank Tinney, comedian of the "Watch Your Step" company, served as auctioneer for the greater part of the evening, while Vernon Castle of "Watch Your Step" and Leon Carillo of the "Twin Beds" company substituted for him at times.

A party of opera singers and others including Felice Lyne, her mother, Elvira Leveroni, Dr. and Mme. Tamaka Miura, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Young, Luisa Villani and Max Hirsch, occupied one of the tables during the auction.

REPORT ENGLAND PLANS TO SEND VAST ARMY TO THE BALKANS

If the main British forces were withdrawn from France and sent to the Balkans, one very perplexing problem would be solved. General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, would be the supreme authority on the western front. While Joffre and Sir John French have been working in harmony, though with divided authority, the situation would be much simplified from a military standpoint if one or the other were absolute.

The Balkan situation, too, would be cleared if England's main forces were there. Neither Greece or Rumania would waver, the experts declare, if England were to send to the Near East sufficient forces to assure victory over the military machine dominated by Prussia.

GREECE GIVES PLEDGES.

"A victorious army is more powerful than all the diplomacy of the world," was the phrase recently coined by a Balkan diplomat. This is apparently true in the Balkans, but diplomacy is still being utilized there in every possible way. With Greece apparently determined to maintain a "hands off" policy for the present, the entente and central powers are each doing their utmost to keep the Greeks in line.

A Bucharest dispatch states that the Turks are trying to effect a Greco-Turkish alliance similar to that of which Greece and Rumania are members. Germany, it says, is going a step farther, attempting to join Greece, Bulgaria and Turkey in a strong defensive agreement.

That Greece has given satisfactory promises to the entente powers was the assertion of Denys Cochin, minister without portfolio in the French cabinet, when he arrived at Messina, Italy, today from Athens en route to Paris.

"I have full confidence in the assurances of King Constantine and Greek statesmen regarding the safety of the allies in Macedonia," said M. Cochin. "Every other promise will also be kept. Of that I am confident.

"While I believe that Greece cannot intervene immediately, I am firmly convinced that before long the Greek army will take the field at the side of the allies."

60,000 SERBS ESCAPE.

Eighty thousand Serbian troops escaped into the mountains of Albania and Montenegro, according to official reports which reached the allies' headquarters at Salonica today, and are now being organized into an effective army which will take the offensive as soon as supplies which are now on the way arrive.

Both the Serbian and French troops in Southern Serbia are in full retreat, the Bulgarian War Office announced today. Bulgarian forces are nearing Monastir. The Bulgarian General Staff reports as follows, under date of November 28:

"On the Southern Macedonian front we occupied the last Serbian position of the Prilop-Monastir road Friday. The Serbians continued their retreat toward Monastir road Friday. The Serbians continued their retreat toward Monastir with our troops rapidly pursuing.

"Retreating to the right bank of the Cerna, the French destroyed bridges near Vardar, near Vyerovi, and also near the defile across the Baltalica ranch."

PRIZREND CAPTURED.

Prizrend, whence the Serbian government fled to Scutari, was captured by Bulgarian troops on Sunday, the German War Office announced today. Three thousand Serbian soldiers and eight cannon fell into the hands of the Bulgarians in the Rudnik region and west of the Stinica River. 1,000 other Serbians have been captured.

BERLIN SAYS ENGLISH 'TURN TO EGYPT AFTER FAILURE IN BALKANS'

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—That marked differences of French and English policy developed during the visits at Athens of Denys Cochin and Earl Kitchener is the assertion in dispatches to Budapest newspapers from the Greek capital.

"While Kitchener wanted Greece to enter the war on the side of the allies," they say, "Cochin asked only free passage for the retreating Anglo-French forces. The French view received the more favorable consideration from Premier Skouloudis, and Kitchener, considering the game lost, went to Rome to ask for Italian help in Egypt, which is now apparently the only country that interests England after the Balkan failure."

Silloway, City Hall Cupid Aid, Is Dead at 56

Charles E. Silloway, assistant city messenger and for thirty-seven years connected with the city messenger's office, died early today at his home, No. 28 Rockland street, from heart trouble. Death was probably hastened by an encounter with a burglar at his home some months ago from which he suffered a nervous shock. He was fifty-six years old.

Mr. Silloway was a Justice of the peace, with power to perform marriages, and married scores of couples at City Hall. In case there were objections to the publicity of a City Hall ceremony, Mr. Silloway retained a room at Young's Hotel, where the ceremony could be performed in a more quiet manner.

Maggie Teyte's doll, dressed as an Irish boy, went to H. H. Robertson for $14.

The Japanese doll, dressed by Tamaka Miura, the Japanese prima donna at the Opera, was sold to Richard Ames for $27.

A special delivery package addressed to Miss Maggie Teyte was received, containing a doll dressed by Miss Cavanagh, with a request that it be sold to help the fund. It went to William A. Byrne for $11.

A lady sent in four dolls, dressed as characters in "Little Women," to be sold. Mrs. Merrick Cowles bought one for $5. Mrs. Tinney bought one for $3. Harry White bought one for $6.50 and the fourth went to Mrs. Vernon Castle for $7—a total of $21.50 for the four. These dolls were auctioned by Leon Carrillo of the "Twin Beds" company, plying across the street from the Georgian at the Park Square Theatre.

PLANS FOR BALL.

With the doll auction out of the way, plans were set afoot today for the Charity Ball.

It is planned that part of the profits of this ball shall go to the Christmas Dinner Basket Fund of the AMERICAN; and a part to the Boston Post Santa Claus Fund.

The Charity Ball, though it may be the most important and the most promising of the events planned to boost the Christmas Basket Fund, is by no means the only one.

For one other thing, there is to be a big theatrical benefit on Thursday, December 16.

Stage folk have agreed to help, and the Christmas Basket Editor is able to promise some surprises, and some splendid attractions in connection with this benefit.

On the night of December 6, a dansant, planned by theatrical folk, will be held at the Georgian; and from that also will come a substantial sum to help the Fund.

A subscription dance at the Copley Plaza on the evening of December 17 is another event of importance.

Through the courtesy of the Big "I" Film Company, which has leased the Boston Theatre and is there presenting the Triangle Plays, a concert has been arranged for Sunday, December 5, to help along the fund.

Suggestions for Xmas Presents

'SPY' SAVED BY ROOSEVELT IS IN BOSTON

Kenneth W. Triest, the Princeton student who enlisted in the English navy and was subsequently arrested and faced death as a German spy, but who was released through the intercession of former President Roosevelt, has come to Boston and is living in one of the suburbs with relatives.

This became known today. Young Triest returned to this country in the custody of his father, after being released by the British government upon testimony that he was mentally unbalanced.

Triest left Princeton about New Years of last year. Search for him failing, detectives were put on his track. They had had no success, when a chum received a letter from him in England, and reported the fact to his father, Wolfgang Gustave Triest of New York.

Shortly afterward the elder Triest learned that his son, after enlisting, had been detected in correspondence which marked him, apparently, as a spy. The elder Triest immediately started, by means of appeals to Secretary Lansing, and by engaging as counsel former Senator J. Mayhew Wainwright, efforts to save his son's life.

The British Embassy assisted, and a letter from Colonel Roosevelt finally moved the British government to agree that Triest might not be brought to trial if his father would bring him home to this country.

HOTEL MEN AND BOARD CONFER ON DANCING

The agitation caused by public dancing in cafes and hotels resulted in a private conference today between the Licensing Board of Boston and about twenty-five hotel and cafe proprietors.

The purpose was to determine the practical effect of dancing in the hotels since the bars were let down by the board. While Chairman Charles H. Gow and the other members of the board refused to officially discuss the meeting, it was said that the conference was really an "investigation" by the board to determine the advisability of continuing the terpsichorean entertainment in the hotels and cafes.

It was stated that no formal complaint against dancing had been received.

The new order of things was said to have divulged a difference of opinion among hotel men.

BY HARRY J. HAISELDEN, M. D.

In the preceding chapter Dr. Haiselden told of how he took from the hospital an infant in the sight of Baby Bollinger, sought the great ballistic to help him keep his mental balance in his struggle to decide the question of this baby's life or death.

Read chapter four today, in which he tells of the continuance of his advancement of the strange life and death story of Baby Bollinger.

CHAPTER IV.

"Hope and Despair."

I returned from that walk refreshed and steadied, in a better frame of mind to cope with the problem that confronted me.

As I entered the hospital a little, round, white bundle came toddling swiftly across with a cry of joy.

It was Hope, my little adopted daughter—the child of the hospital.

All of that heavy weight of care fell from me as I prayed with the child. She had learned a new word within a day—and, strange to say, that word was "mamma."

And this child never knew her "mamma"—but she had learned the word anyhow.

So when she lay snuggled up to my arms she kept saying over and over again, "Mamma, mamma, mamma."

This Mother Abandons Babe.

I had had her for seventeen months. She was born in the hospital. Immediately all the nurses voted her the most beautiful baby they had ever seen. The mother lay with her face to the wall and did not seem to care. Even when a nurse took the baby to her she would scarcely smile. She was a pale, miserable, nervous creature, with a tendency for none but herself.

One night a nurse went to her room with a tray and found her gone. She had got up out of bed, dressed herself and left the building.

She never came back. At first we thought she would come back and call for the baby, but weeks and then months passed, and we did not hear from her.

At the hospital we all were in love with the rosy little thing that was marooned there. At last I made up my mind to keep her. We called her Hope. She was the healthiest, happiest child I ever had seen. Hope seemed to be the only fitting name for her.

She was "Hope" for me now, as I sat there in the reception room of the hospital, with the dark cloud of my great problem growing blacker and blacker over my head.

Comparison of 2 Babes.

Here in my arms close to my breast I held one child — a fair, normal, sound, vigorous little being. And yet a few days after its birth the mother had deserted it—had run back into the world from which she had come, caring not a farthing what might happen to her baby. "Hope" — so we called her, and Hope she was—hope for the race. Hope sparkled in the blue of her eyes; hope shone ruddily in the pink of her cheeks; hope roared lustily from her sturdy little lungs—mostly in laughter, but occasionally in good, honest bawling.

I pressed her closer to me.

Then into my ears trickled that thin, pitiful whine of the other child that lay in the next room. I did not really hear it, for it was too sickly a note to carry so far—even through the single thickness of a thinly paneled oak door. But it sounded in my ear with uncanny shrillness. It was an unpleasant sound.

Here in my arms was one child full of radiant health. Its life stretched out before it like a sunny open road. That quick little brain, already busy in the gathering of impressions; already solving the simple problems of child life; already puzzling itself over the early mysteries of life, would grow in power and strength. It would guide and control the movements of life surely and successfully.

Here was a life that was well worth the saving.

Here were the beginnings of a life that would be sweet and beautiful—a profitable existence. So much so that I was willing to devote the rest of my own years to the launching of this trim little craft so that it would float buoyantly on the waters of life.

The laugh of Hope rang in my ears like silver music.

The whine of the unfinished one —the babe with the death brand on its brow even in the dark hour of its birth—trembled in my ears.

And I was thinking—thinking.

What a vigil! There I sat for an hour, with Hope lying securely and comfortably in my arms. She slept peacefully—soundly—sweetly. Her breath came like faint music. It stimulated me. It made a man of me—a man with more purpose and with higher resolve.

With the plump little arms of one child clasped hotly about my neck I was calmly condemning another child to the grave. I was coolly deciding that its best cradle would be the churchyard plot. With the pure breath of one child beating in soft, warm little waves against my breast I was counting the moments when the breathing of another little one would be cut short.

Baby Bollinger had not been given a name—no arbitrary name had yet been forced upon it by blind, unreasoning prejudice that could not see it go to its grave as it had come—nameless.

I thought of it as I sat there holding Hope close to my heart.

Handicaps of Ugliness.

If this one child's name was Hope, the name of that other child —the little doomed one—was surely Despair. Its life did not stretch away before it like a broad, sunswept road. A dark and unwholesome tunnel, filled with ghastly creeping things was the best it might expect. There was no brightness for those whose brains are filled with blackness—no happiness for those who are crowded with dullness and abnormality and sickliness.

I have said that I am in love with Life. That does not mean that I am an epicure, craving only the good things of life. I love its rough and tumble; I love its hardships, its problems, its obstacles that challenge the mightiest efforts we can put forth to surmount them.

To me, Hope meant life. I could not see such a life sacrificed, as I knew it would be sacrificed, if this happy little girl were turned astray in some great institution for children whose parents have died or abandoned them. I knew that this abundant, jubilant life would be crammed into a hard groove. It would not have a chance to develop into beauty or completeness.

So I took Hope as my own. I will always keep her and always love her.

Does that same instinct that compelled me to become the foster-father of little Hope also compel me to devote my energy and my skill to the saving of that which can never be anything but "Despair?"

As much as I love life, I cannot force myself to conserve wretched, uncompleted fragments of it. A child is the most wonderful thing in the world. It is full of the promise of great beauty and usefulness. A semi-child, a fraction of a baby, is not a beautiful thing. It is a monstrosity. It is not to be saved.

It is an unfortunate thing that Science and Religion do not often go together. In my life the two always have harmonized. I have never gone so far with my theories and my practice that I believed that I was capable of going the road alone.

Then, at last, I knew that in deciding to let the life of Baby Bollinger end itself naturally I was doing the right thing.

By permitting Death to come unchallenged I would perform my life's great deed.

"INTELLECTUAL LOVE TRIANGLE" IN RANTOUL CASE

she had met him; one to Wareham, another to a country club at Barnstable and a third to Northampton.

QUESTIONED BY PROCTOR.

Mrs. Rantoul, who was under direct examination yesterday for three hours, was examined by Attorney Thomas W. Proctor, her chief counsel.

Q.—When Mr. Rumrill was on the island he was asked some questions about a trip with you to the Nonquit Club. Was there such a trip? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you kindly state what the condition of your health was at that time? A.—Dr. Barnes had advised me to take a trip.

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul know about it? A.—Oh, yes. It was through his friendship that arrangements were made for me.

Q.—Did Mr. Rumrill drive you there? A.—Yes. He did.

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul know about it? A.—He did.

Q.—Did you have luncheon on the road? A.—We did.

Q.—How long did you remain at the club? A.—About ten days.

Q.—Did Mr. Rumrill visit you there? A.—Yes; once.

Q.—How long did he stay? A.—He just dropped in for lunch, I think. It was just a short visit, anyway.

Q.—Did he drive you home? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Rantoul, you were asked at the last divorce trial by Mr. Hunt, "Did you grow to love Mr. Rumrill?" and your answer was "I was in love with him." Is that correct? A.—Yes.

Q.—You were also asked by Mr. Hunt if that love was deep and genuine, or a superficial love, and your answer was "Genuine while it lasted," is that accurate, Mrs. Rantoul? A.—Yes, Mr. Proctor.

Q.—Did Mr. Rumrill ever kiss you, Mrs. Rantoul? A.—Yes, two or three times.

Q.—On what occasions, Mrs. Rantoul? A.—On different occasions. I cannot recall now.

ASKS ABOUT TRIP.

Q.—Did Mr. Rumrill ever take any other liberties with you, Mrs. Rantoul? A.—No.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Rantoul, there has been some question about a trip to Wareham for a week-end party, among whom was Mr. Rumrill. When was that trip? A.—It was in 1911—in the Spring.

Q.—Who constituted the party? A.—Mr. Codman, Mr. Rantoul, Mr. Rumrill and myself.

Q.—Didn't Mr. Rumrill and you come to Boston a short time after by motor? A.—Yes, we came over the road by motor a short while after.

Q.—Has Mr. Rumrill ever given you gifts? A.—Yes.

RECEIVED GIFT.

Q.—Did he ever give you a bag? A.—He did.

Q.—What about a present of a pair of stockings? A.—Why, Mr. Rumrill and I had a bet on a tennis match and he lost.

Q.—Did he ever give you any books? A.—Yes. A few.

Q.—Did he ever give you earrings? A.—Yes. I think it was in June, 1911.

Q.—Were these earrings intended for a birthday present? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul know about these earrings? A.—Not until I told him.

Q.—Were they diamond earrings? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he ever give you a finger ring? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who got that ring? A.—I did. Q.—Was that ring exchanged to Mr. Rumrill? A.—Yes, it was.

Q.—What about a trip to Northampton with Mr. Rumrill? A.—I went to Northampton in the Spring of 1910 with the intention of visiting my brother, Dr. Burnett.

Q.—Who was with you on that trip besides Mr. Rumrill? A.—The chauffeur.

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul know about this trip? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you corresponded with Mr. Rumrill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Mr. Rumrill furnish you with self-addressed envelopes? A.—Yes; once.

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul know your sentiments for Mr. Rumrill from December, 1910, until July, 1911? A.—I do not know, Mr. Proctor.

ADMITTED LETTERS.

Mr. Proctor then questioned Mrs. Rantoul about the cruise which Rantoul made on Rumrill's yacht with the Eastern Yacht Club cruise in 1911 to Maine. She admitted writing to both her husband and Rumrill while they were on this cruise.

Q.—When did Mr. Rantoul return from the cruise? A.—Monday morning, July 18, 1911.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with him? A.—Yes.

Q.—With Mr. Rumrill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mr. Rantoul present when you talked with Mr. Rumrill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Rantoul of your love for Mr. Rumrill? A.—I told him everything.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, next morning? A.—Yes, between 5 and 6 o'clock.

Q.—Was Edward Rantoul present? A.—Yes.

PLANNED TALK.

Q.—What happened. A.—When they came I told Neal Rantoul that Edward Rantoul was going to Salem to stop Mr. Rumrill from coming down to see me. I did not want him to go to Salem or Boston to see Mr. Rumrill before I saw him. I thought that the only sane thing was for the three of us, Mr. Rantoul, Mr. Rumrill and myself to have a talk. I insisted on this.

Q.—When he said he was going to Salem or Boston to stop Mr. Rumrill did you have any intention of leaving Mr. Rantoul? A.—No.

Q.—What else happened? A.—I asked Neal Rantoul to quiet Edward.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He told him to shut up.

Q.—Did Edward heed his brother? A.—For a few minutes, but Neal had to tell him several times.

Q.—What did Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul say? A.—They talked about my leaving the children and much I do not remember.

SEVERAL "NO" ANSWERS.

Q.—Did you say at that time that Mr. Rumrill's love was "heaven-sent and divine." A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that Mr. Rantoul needed your love more than Mr. Rantoul. A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that you were sorry for Mr. Rantoul and happy until this new love came into your life? A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that Mr. Rantoul's sister could bring up the children? A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that you wanted the Rantoulls to go out of your life and forget them? A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that if you were not permitted to see Mr. Rumrill first you would go to Salem and meet him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you go to Salem and meet him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Rumrill come that morning? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did this conversation between you and Mr. Rantoul and Mr. Rumrill take place? A.—In the room called the telephone room at Beverly Farms.

Q.—Tell what was said? A.—I told Mr. Rumrill everything and that I wanted to see him first alone because I didn't know what misrepresentation Mr. Rantoul might make to him.

ALONE FOUR MINUTES.

Q.—How long were you in the room alone with Mr. Rumrill? A.—About four minutes.

Q.—What did Mr. Rumrill say to Mr. Rantoul when Mr. Rantoul came into the room? A.—He said he wanted to see Mr. Rantoul in his rooms about going away.

Q.—What had been said about going away? A.—Mr. Rantoul had told Mr. Rumrill that he ought to go out and get away.

Mrs. Rantoul told of going to Greenfield the following Monday. Letters were then introduced which Mrs. Rantoul wrote to her husband from Greenfield.

Q.—What did you say to Mr. Rantoul in these letters? A.—I told him that he must know that I was not wholly to blame and that if he wanted to sue Mr. Rumrill for alienation of my affections he should go ahead. I told him I was there for a rest and was going to stay there until rested. When Mr. Rantoul came to see me there, we were unable to get a private sitting room so we conversed in the hotel office. Mr. Rantoul did not stay that night. He returned to Boston.

Mrs. Rantoul denied that she ever promised not to see Rumrill again. She testified that her husband had made repeated suicide attempts. She said:

"THREATENED SUICIDE."

"He told me three different times that he would do away with himself. These occasions were at Cambridge, Beverly Farms and Wareham. He stated that he would take poison; again he endeavored to get possession of some razors in the house at Wareham. I thwarted his plans."

When asked by Mr. Proctor to tell the court some of the names her husband had called her she replied, "He used to call me a 'street walker,' 'low down woman,' 'dirty liar,' 'woman of the gutter,' and called me a '——— fool' many times."

She added: "Once when I was in bed, sick, he came into the room, put his fist under my chin and pushed my head back with a jerk.

"Another time, when I was very sick, he shook me very hard. Once he endeavored to get my wedding ring away from me by grabbing both of my arms and holding me while he tried to get the ring. Also at Elmwood, when I started to answer the door bell he seized me by the neck and jerked me back into the room."

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she fixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, told the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

DEFENCE LOSES ON SHIP PLOT MOTIONS

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The Hamburg-American Line defendants in the ship conspiracy trial today lost all their contentions. Federal Judge Howe over-ruled the motion by Howard Gans to dismiss the indictments and also over-ruled the motion by William Rand, Jr., to strike out the Marina Quesada evidence mentioning the name of Captain Karl Boy-Ed, naval attache of the German Embassy.

H. Snowden Marshall, United States District Attorney, answered the motions of the defence by declaring that regardless of whether the sending out of the supply ships was lawful or not it had been proved that the defendants falsified their manifest.

"Why," asked the judge, "did you not say in your manifests that you were going to sail the seas up and down to supply German ships?"

"Suppose we had stated that as our purpose," retorted Attorney Gans, "would we have got our clearance? I think not. Under a clearance a master can put in at any port of call whether mentioned or not in the clearance and no one has said or can say that we did not intend to go to our ports of ultimate destination."

What Is the Answer?

STRIVE TO WIPE OUT ARMENIAN PEOPLE

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

The Second and Concluding Article on the Armenian Massacres.

ROME, Nov. 26.—When the Young Turks overthrew Sultan Abdul Hamid and, under the leadership of Enver Pasha, established a new government the step was hailed throughout the civilized world as a great advance for the Ottoman empire.

It is the Young Turks and Enver Pasha, however, that are held responsible by the Armenian leaders for massacres that have practically destroyed the Armenian race.

In the dispatch sent by the International News Service correspondent yesterday the conditions prevailing in Armenia were described from the official reports received at the Armenian College in Rome. Today's story deals with the motives and men behind the massacres. It comes from the Armenian people who were united in yesterday's dispatch as stating that Shakir Armenians have disappeared since the massacres began. Here it is in his own words:

"Enver Pasha, the man behind the massacre, said in an interview that statement of the Armenian population was a precautionary measure.

GIVES THE FACTS.

"But here are the facts:

"At the beginning of the war the Turkish army succeeded in pressing the Caucasian border and in penetrating into Russian Armenia. What it did was this.

"The Kurds massacred the harmless Armenians who fell into their hands.

"But in April last the Russians took the offensive and drove the Turks back. When the retreating army reached Van the Turks suspected the Armenian population of the city would avenge the murdered brothers in Russian Armenia and the Armenians' disarmament was ordered. Disarmament is the first step toward a massacre.

"As soon as the Van Armenians were told that they must hand in their arms they knew what was next. When the troops would receive the order to butcher them. They decided to resist and barricaded themselves in their quarters.

RESISTED WHOLE ARMY.

"They resisted a whole army, and soon the artillery was brought into action. One of our priests who succeeded in escaping to Tiflis has written us that the bombardment continued a month.

"In a month over 18,000 shells were hurled against the Armenian quarters until it was nothing but a mass of ruins. Still the Armenians resisted until one day the survivors saw that the city was being evacuated. What had happened? The Russian army was advancing and the Turks fled—fled, taking with them the Turkish population.

"The order for the general massacre of the Armenians all over the empire was soon issued from Constantinople and, we have reason to believe, is still going on.

"We are confronted with a deliberate, cool-blooded plan to annihilate the Armenian race, or better, this massacre has obtained the solemn form of a government policy.

"We have been an loyal, as devoted subjects of the empire as any other nationality within its borders; we have paid our taxes and vastly contributed to the nation's prosperity. We have fought and worked. In exchange for all this we have asked nothing but the elementary God-given right to develop in peace and rear our children in the faith of our fathers.

"Instead we have been massacred. Will the world raise a finger for us?"

LAWYER PLEADS 'FRAME-UP' ON MISS FLYNN

By International News Service.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30.—Declaring that the accusations against Elizabeth Gurley Flynn were a police "frame-up" Attorney Alexander Simpson opened the defence of the woman leader of the I. W. W. today with a plea to the jury to declare her innocent of the charge of "inciting to violence."

"There is more to this case than is contained in the indictment," said Mr. Simpson. "Our defence is that Miss Flynn did not say what she is accused of saying.

"There was industrial warfare here and Miss Flynn was invited to come to Paterson and make a speech. She came, but merely urged the strikers to stick together.

The attorney then accused the State's witnesses of committing perjury and added:

"This is a frameup, an absolute frameup, and Jersey justice demands that this woman be acquitted."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.—Advertisement.

MALDEN WOMAN'S RECOVERY ALMOST INCREDIBLE

Suffering From Rheumatic Arthritis---- Tells How Simple Remedy Enabled Her to Discard Wheel Chair and Crutches.

Suffering from rheumatic arthritis to such an extent that she had to be lifted from the bed to a wheel chair every day was the experience of Mrs. P. Stanwood of 39 Columbia st., Malden, Mass. Mrs. Stanwood said:

"I suffered from rheumatic arthritis for years. It first started in my foot, which was extremely sore and painful; gradually it extended to my knees and I was unable to bend them to any extent, the cords became stiff and drawn tight like steel wire. My physician pronounced my case arthritis and continued to treat me and the disease continued to spread until every joint in my body was afflicted except my hands. My hips became involved and it was impossible for me to move without the most extreme pain. Finally my condition was such that I had to use a wheel chair and my husband would lift me from the bed to the chair every day.

"I had to have assistance all the time as my shoulders and arms were useless. I could not bear to move them, they seemed to be locked in their joints. One day I fell from the wheel chair, and on account of my condition my daughter could not get me back alone. In consequence I lay on the floor from two o'clock until five, when assistance arrived. Only one who suffers from this dread disease can understand the terrible suffering I passed through.

"Three physicians told me they had done all in their power, that the disease was beyond treatment; I could never be cured. In spite of this discouragement I felt that there was—there must be—some remedy that would reach my case if I could only find it. Reading so much about the remarkable recoveries through the use of Varner-sis, I decided that this was the one remedy I had long been looking for. I sent to the drug store and secured Var-ner-sis immediately. I persisted in the treatment for some time, the stiffness gradually left me so that I could discard the wheel chair and go about on crutches. I soon abandoned my crutches and today can go about doing my housework without the use of either. I can now go outside the house the first time for two years, but use a cane to make sure of myself—a new woman free from the terrible thought of being a helpless invalid, free from the terrible pain and stiffness of this dread disease. Var-ner-sis is a wonderful remedy, and what a wonderful blessing this sufferers can secure it so easily. I would be pleased to have any sufferer call or write to me."

INSIDE THE LINES

A Fascinating New Love Story of the European War

By EARL DERR BIGGERS, Author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," and Robert Welles Ritchie

CHAPTER XXXI.
Capper Tells All.

THE little spy was near a state of nervous breakdown. Following the surprising and unexpected collapse of his plan to do a murder, he had spent a wakeful and brandy-punctuated night, his brain on the rack. His desire to play informer, heightened now a hundredfold by the flaying tongue of Louisa, was almost balanced by his fears of resultant consequences.

Capidity, the old instinct for preying, drove him to impart to the clever-governor-general of Gibraltar information which, he hoped, would be worth its weight in gold; Louisa's promise of a party a deux before a firing squad, which he knew it, his heart she would be capable of arranging in a desperate moment, halted him. After screwing up his courage to the point of telephoning for an appointment, Capper had wallowed in fear.

He dared not stay away from Government House then for fear of arousing suspicion; equally he dared not involve the girl from the Willehelmstrasse lest he find himself tangled in his own mesh.

At the desperate moment of his introduction to General Craudall, Capper determined to play it safe and see how the chips fell. His heart quailed as he heard the doors shut behind him.

"Awfully good of you to see me," he babbled as he stood before the desk, turning his hat brim through his fingers like a prayer wheel.

General Crandall bade him be seated. "I haven't forgotten you did me a service in Burma," he added.

"Oh, yes—of course," Capper managed to answer. "But that was my job. I got paid for that."

"You're not with the Brussels secret-service people any longer, then?"

Capper's embarrassment increased.

"Well, to tell the truth, General Crandall—ah—I did go to pieces for a time. I've been playing a pretty short string for the last two years. But"—he broke off his whine in a sudden accession of passion—"they can't keep me down much longer. I'm going to show 'em!"

General Crandall looked his surprise.

"General, I'm an Englishman. You know that. I may be down and out, and my old friends may not know me when we meet—but I'm English. And I'm loyal!" Capper was getting a grip on himself; he thought the patriotic line a safe one to play with the commander of a fortress.

"Yes—yes. I don't question that, I'm sure," the general grunted, and he began to riffle some papers on his desk petulantly.

Capper pressed home his point. "I just want you to keep that in mind, General, while I talk. Just remember I'm English—and loyal."

The governor nodded impatiently.

Capper leaned far over the desk, and began in an eager whisper: "General, I remember Cook—that's chap in Rangoon—the player! The other looked blank. "Haven't forgotten him, General? How he lived in Burma two years, mingling with the English until one day somebody discovered he was not Kochi and that he was a mighty unhealthy chap to go about the fortifications. Surely—"

"Yes, I remember him now.—But what—"

"There was Hollister, too. You played billiards at the club with Hollister, I fancy. Thought him all right, too—until a couple of army service men walked into the club one day and clapped handcuffs on him. Remember that, General?"

The commander exclaimed snappishly that he could not see his visitor's drift.

"I'm just refreshing your memory, General," Capper hastened to reassure. "Just reminding you that there isn't much difference between a German and an Englishman, after all—if the German wants to play the Englishman and knows his book. He can fool a lot of us."

"Indeed! But I don't see what all this has to do with——"

"Just a moment, General!" Capper was trembling in his eagerness. "I'm just in from Alexandria—came on the Princess Mary. There was an English-lishman aboard, bound for Gib. Name was Captain Woodhouse. Was the air-ial service."

"Quite right. What of that?" General Crandall looked up suspiciously.

"Have you see Captain Woodhouse, General?"

"Not half an hour ago. He called to report."

"Seemed all right to you—this Woodhouse?" Capper eyed the other's face narrowly.

Capper Eyed the General Closely

"Of course. Why not?"

"Remember Cook, General? Remember Hollister?" Capper warned.

General Crandall exploded brutishly: "What the devil do you mean? What are you driving at, man?"

The little spy leaped to his feet in his excitement and thrust his weasel face far across the desk.

"What do I mean? I mean this chap who calls himself Woodhouse isn't Woodhouse at all. He's a German spy—from the Wilhelmstrasse—with a number from the Wilhelmstrasse! He's on the Rock to do a spy's work!"

"Pshaw! Why did Brussels let you go?" General Crandall tipped back in his seat and cast an amused glance at the flushed face before him.

Capper shook his head doggedly. "I'm not drunk, General Crandall. I'm so broke I couldn't get drunk if I would. So help me, I'm telling God's truth. I got it straight—" Capper checked his fumult of words and did some rapid thinking. How much did he dare reveal? "In Alexandria, General—got it there—from the inside, sir. Keeh is the head of the Wilhelmstrasse crowd there—the same Cook you knew in Rangoon; he's engineered the job. The wildest dreams of the Wilhelmstrasse have come true. They've got a man in your signal tower, General—in your signal tower!"

General Crandall, in whom incredulity was beginning to give way to the first faint glimmerings of conviction as to the possibility of truth in the informer's tale, rallied himself nevertheless to combat the caperson cast on a British officer.

"Suppose Woodhouse has been a spy in my signal tower or anywhere here!" he began argumentatively. "Suppose they learn every nook and corner of the Rock—have the cutlest system of coast defense; yes, and couldn't capture Gibraltar in a thousand years."

"I don't know what they want!" Capper returned, with the injured air of a man whose motives are misunderstood. "I only came here to warn you that your Captain Woodhouse is taking orders from Berlin."

"Come—come, man! Give me some proof to back up this cock-and-bull story," General Crandall snapped. He had risen, and was pacing nervously back and forth.

Capper was secretly elated at this sign that his story had struck home. He stilled the fluttering of his hands by an effort, and tried to bring his voice to the normal.

"Here it is, General—all I've got of the story. The real Woodhouse comes down from somewhere up in the Nile—I don't know where—and puts up for the night in Alexandria to wait for the Princess Mary. No friends in the town, you know; nowhere to visit. Three Wilhelmstrasse men in Alexandria, headed by that clever devil Cook, or Koch, who calls himself a doctor now. Somehow they get hold of the real Woodhouse and do for him—what I don't know—probably kill the poor devil.

"General, I saw with my own eyes an unconscious British officer being carried away from Koch's house in Ramleh in an automobile—two men with him." Capper fixed the governor with a lean index finger dramatically. "And I saw the man you just this morning received as Captain Woodhouse leave Doctor Koch's house five minutes after that poor devil—the real Woodhouse—had been carried off. That's the reason I took the same boat with him to Gibraltar, General Crandall—because I'm loyal and it was my duty to warn you."

"Incredible!"

"One thing more, General." Capper was sorely tempted, but for the minute his wholesome fear of consequences curbed his tongue. "Woodhouse isn't working alone on the Rock; you can be sure of that. He's got friends to help him turn over every trick he's after—maybe in this very house. They're clever people, you can mark that down on your slate."

They Never Could Take Gibraltar

"Ridiculous!" The keeper of the Rock was fighting not to believe now. "Why, I tell you if they had a hundred of their spies inside the lines—if they knew the Rock as well as I do they could never take it."

Capper rose wearily, the air of a minute before gone from him.

"Perhaps they aren't tring to capture it. I know nothing about that. Well—I've done my duty—as one Englishman to another. I hope I've told you in time. I'll be going now."

General Crandall swung on him sharply. "Where are you going?" he demanded.

Capper shrugged his shoulders hopelessly. Now was the minute he'd been counting on—the peeling of crackling notes from a fat bundle, the handsome words of appreciation. Surely General Crandall was a tip.

"Well, General, frankly—I'm broke. Haven't a shilling to bless myself with. I thought perhaps—" Capper shot a keen glance at the older man's face, which was pearly tinted by sunset hue. The general appeared to be shedding. He turned abruptly on the spy.

"A few drinks and you might talk," he challenged.

Capper grinned deprecatively. "I don't know, General—might," he murmured. "I've been away from the drink so long that——"

"Where do you want to go?" General Crandall cut him off. "Of course, you don't want to stay here indefinitely."

"Well—if I had a bit of money—they'd tell me everybody's broke in Paris. Millionaires—and everybody you know. You can get a room at the Ritz for the asking. That would be heaven for me—if I had something in my pocket."

"You want to go to Paris, eh?" General Crandall's voice softened to Capper, and his eyes narrowed in scorn.

"If it could be arranged, yes, General." Capper was spinning the brim of his bowler between nervous fingers. He did not dare meet the other's glance.

"Dammit, Capper! You come here in blackmail and I'm not sure but bribery! I know how to deal with your ilk."

"I help me, General, I came here to tell you the truth. I want to go to Paris—or anywhere away from here; I'll admit that. But that had nothing to do with my coming all the way here from Alexandria—spending my last guinea on a steamer ticket—to warn you of your danger. I'm an Englishman and—loyal!" Capper was pleading now. All hope or reason had sped and the vision of a cell with subsequent investigations into his own record appalled him. General Crandall sat down at his desk and began to write.

"I don't know—at any rate, I can't have you talking around here. You're going to Paris."

Capper dropped his hat. At a tap of the bell Jamie Khan appeared at the doors, so suddenly that one must have said he was right behind them all the time. General Crandall directed that his orderly be summoned. When the subaltern appeared, the general handed him a sealed note.

"Orderly, turn this gentleman over to Sergeant Crosby at once," he commanded. "And give the sergeant this note." Then to Capper: "You will cross to Algeciras, where you will be put on a train for Madrid. You will have a ticket for Paris and twenty shillings for expense en route. You will be allowed to talk to no one alone before you leave Gibraltar, and under no circumstances will you be allowed to return—not while I am governor-general, at least."

Capper, his face pallid with newfound joy, turned to pass out with the orders. He paused at the door on his way to frame a speech of thanks, but General Crandall's back was toward him. "Paris!" he sighed in rapture, and the doors closed behind him.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

The scene is at Government House, Gibraltar; the time the first week of the European War. Jane Gerson, an American girl buying Paris gowns for a New York house, has fled from Paris to Gib., with precious models.

Louisa, a Wilhelmstrasse worker, has used Billy Capper, a discredited spy, as a dupe to have him furnished with a Wilhelmstrasse number (1582), which the false Woodhouse gets.

Lady Crandall, a former American girl and now wife of the Governor-General of Gib., invites Jane Gerson and the Shermans, a party of stranded Americans, to Government House to await the sailing of the Sapanola.

Louisa, now posing as Josepha, a cigar girl, has come to Gibraltar and is working with Proprietor Almer of the Hotel Splendide, a third Wilhelmstrasse conspirator. Almer tells Woodhouse of Room D in the signal tower on the Rock which controls the harbor mines over which the British fleet will anchor. There is a fellow-conspirator in the Crandall household, too. Woodhouse reports to General Crandall, being accepted as the real Woodhouse.

Billy Capper comes to General Crandall to sell out the plot for money and revenge.

CHAPTER XXXII.
Her Country's Example.

"DO you know, my dear, Cynthia Maxwell is simply going to stay with envy when she sees me in this!" The plump little mistress of Government House, standing before a full-length mirror, in her boudoir, surveyed herself with intense satisfaction. Her arms and neck, bare and startlingly from the dripping sheath of the incomparable Doucillet gown that was Jane Gerson's despair for official reception in the back of the morning light pouring through the multihued windows Lady Crandall seemed a pink and white—and unusually showy—thing in bloom out of doors. Hildebrand's bayed on his knees and with deft fingers busy with the soft folds of the skirt, answered through a mouthful of pins.

"Poof, Cynthia, my heart goes out to her."

"Oh, it needn't!" Lady Crandall answered, with a tilting of her chin—ly Iowa style now. "The Maxwell person has been blessed more than once here on the Rock with the gowns a fond mama sends her from Paris. But, honestly, isn't this a bit low for a staid middle-aged person like myself? I'm afraid I'll have trouble getting my precious Doucillet past the censor." Lady Crandall plumed herself with secret joy.

Jane looked up, puzzled.

"Oh, that's old Lady Porter—a perfect dragon," the general's wife rattled on. "Poor old dear, she thinks the Lord put her on the Rock for a purpose. Her own collars get higher and higher. I believe if she ever was presented at court she'd emulate the old Scotch lady who followed the law of decollete, but preserved her self-respect by wearing a red flannel chest protector. You must meet her."

"I'm afraid I won't have time to get a look at your dragon," Jane returned, with a little laugh, all happiness. "Now that Sir George has promised me I can sail on the Saxonia Friday——"

"You really must——" The envious eyes of Lady Crandall fell on the pile of plain-potent Delphic mysteries to charm the heart of woman—to lay scattered about upon the floor.

Jane sat back on her heels and surveyed the folds of white silk with an artist's eye.

"If you only knew—what it means to me to get back with my baskets full of French beauties! Why, when I screwed up my courage two months ago to go to old Hildebrand and ask him to send me abroad as his buyer—I'd been studying drawing and French at night for three years in preparation, you see—he feared like the dear old lion he is and said I was too young. But I cooed and pleaded, and at last he said I could come—on trial, as a season."

"He'll pay like a pussy-cat when you get back," Lady Crandall put in, with a pat on the bowed head at her knees.

"Maybe. If I can slip into New York with my little baskets while all the buyers are still over here, cabling tearfully for money to get home or asking their sons to send a hundred dollars—there's the fun of the peasant's nine all right."

The practical feminine, so strong in Iowa—transplanted stock, prompted a mischievous question:

"Then you won't be leaving somebody behind when you sail—somebody awfully nice and—forgive me if I ask that? All our American girls find the moonlight over on this side so—serious. Witness me—" Blushing truly abroad after school days—and days where I've finished—on a Rock! Lady Crandall bubbled laughter. A

The Strange Meeting Came to Her Memory

Jane was about to reply when second thought checked her tongue. Before her flashed that strange meeting with Captain Woodhouse the night before—a denial of their former meeting, followed by his curious insistence on her keeping it a secret. Well, he had given her cause for their acquaintance. She had promised she would—why she had promised she could not remember. Never had she felt more than at that minute in the capricious room of the Hotel Splendide. Jane Gerson had refused the lure of the circumstance in her mind and a growing distrust of the strange request, as well as at her own compliance with it, was rising in her heart. Still, this Captain Woodhouse was "different," and—this Jane sensed without effort to analyze—the sentiment which he threw about himself but served to set him apart from the common run of men. She had met him, danced with him, a string of the shoulders.

"It's a matter of myself do not know, Lady Crandall—and never will."

Back to the overseeing lure of the Lady Crandall, of the generals and lady brood itself.

"You—don't think this is a shade too young for me, Miss Gerson?" Anxiety pleaded to be quashed.

"Perfectly lovely—for you."

"But I'm no chicken, my dear. If you would look me up in our Social Blue Book in Davenport you'd find it——"

"People don't believe everything they read in the Bible any more," Jane assured her. "You record and Jonah's would both be open to doubt."

"You're very comforting." Lady Crandall beamed. Her maid knocked and entered on the lady's cue. "Come!"

"The general wishes to see you, Lady Crandall, in the library."

"Tell the general I'm in the midst of trying on——" Lady Crandall began, then thought better of her excuse. She dropped the shimmering gown from her shoulders and slipped into a kimono.

"Some stuffy plan for eats, taining some of the officers' wives—it's to Jane. "The real burden of being Governor-General of the Rock falls on the general's wife, my dear. Run along, and when I'm back we'll have that little stroll through the Alameda I've promised you for this morning." She dint.hed her kimono about her and whisked out of the room.

CHAPTER XXXIII.
Dark Suspicions

GENERAL CRANDALL, just rid of the dubious pleasure of Billy Capper's company, was pacing the floor of the library restlessly. He looked up with a smile at his wife's entrance.

"Jane, I want you to do something for me," he said.

"Certainly, dear." Lady Crandall was not an unpleasing picture of ripe loveliness, framed in the soft drape of her Japanese robe. Even in her worry, General Crandall found himself admiring her for the moment.

"There's a new chap in the signal service—just in from Egypt—Captain Woodhouse. I wish you would invite him to tea, my dear."

"Of course; any day."

"This afternoon, if you please, Helen. The general frowned.

His wife looked slightly puzzled. "This afternoon? But, George, dear, isn't that—aren't you—ah—rushing this young man to save him up to Government House so soon after his arrival?" She suddenly remembered something she cared not to review herself. "Besides, I've asked him to dinner—the dinner I'm to give the Americans tomorrow night before they sail."

General Crandall looked his surprised.

"You didn't tell me that. I didn't know you had met him."

"Just happened to," Lady Crandall put in hastily. "Met him at the Hotel Splendide last night when I brought Miss Gerson home with me."

"What was Woodhouse doing at the Splendide?" the general asked suspiciously.

"Why, strolling the night, you feel—on leave. Just off the Penelope with the mails, we was. I believed he did Miss Gerson some sort of a service—and I met him in that way—quite informally."

"Did Miss Gerson—a service—hum!"

"Oh, a trifling thing! It seemed she had an only Kodak with her, and the cautious Almer fellow wouldn't accept it. Captain Woodhouse gave her English for it—to pay her bill. But anyway——"

The General Asks More About Jane

"Has Miss Gerson seen him since?" General Crandall asked sharply.

"Why, George, dear, how could she? We haven't been up from the breakfast table an hour."

Woodhouse was here less than an hour ago to pay his duty call and report," he explained. "I thought perhaps he might have met our guest somewhere in the garden as he was coming or going."

"He did send her some lovely roses," Lady Crandall brightened at the hope her patent inception of a romance; she doted on romances. "They were in Miss Carson's room before she was down to breakfast."

"Roses, eh? And they met informally at the splendide only last night? Suspicion was weighing the general's words. "Isn't that a bit sudden?" I say, do you think Miss Gerson and this Captain Woodhouse had met somewhere before last night?"

"I hardly think so—she on her first trip to the Continent and he coming from Egypt. But——"

"No matter. I want him here to tea this afternoon." The general dismissed the subject and turned to his desk. His lady's curiosity would not be lightly turned away.

"All these questions—aren't they rather absurd? Is anything wrong?" She ran up to him and laid her hands on his shoulders.

"Of course not, dear." He kissed her lightly on the brow. "Now run along and play with that new gown Miss Gerson gave you. I imagine that's the most important thing on the Rock today."

Lady Crandall gave her soldier-husband a peck on each cheek, and skipped back to her room. When he was alone again, General Crandall resumed his restless pacing. Realization suddenly crystallized, and he stepped to the desk telephone. He called a number.

"That you, Bishop? . . . General Crandall speaking. Bishop, you were here on the Rock seven years ago? Good! Pretty good memory for names and faces, eh? Right! . . . I want you to come to Government House for tea at five this afternoon. . . . But run over for a little talk with me some time earlier—an hour from now, say. Rather important. . . . You'll be here . . . Thank you."

Chicago Balks at Tag Day Nuisance

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—A permit for a widow's tag day has been revoked, Alderman Nance, in supporting the revocation, declared that since the original tag day came as a novelty a few years ago, the practice has grown so that the days are few when men coming down town to work are not requested to buy tags for some charity.

"It has become a nuisance, and is particularly undesirable in the present instance," said Mr. Nance.

"QUINNEYS" PLEASES AT TREMONT

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Quinneys," a four-act comedy by Horace Annesley Vachell, began a short stay at the Tremont Theatre last night. It is an English comedy which was originally produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, and which comes directly from New York, where its success was more artistic than financial.

I don't know whether the title of this play would cause people to purchase tickets or not. A good title is a very important asset to a modern play. Something snappy and descriptive that lends itself to advertising devices is a marvelous help to any piece, and "Quinneys" doesn't mean anything except to the comparatively small public which knows the novel from which the play was made.

And "Quinneys" is not a play which will interest people who have been dining heartily and are looking for lots of action and slapstick comedy.

It is a quaint, subtle and winsome little drama with the tiniest thread of a story—an exquisitely constructed trifle—nine-tenths of its appeal being the lovable but eccentric fu-niture dealer, Quinney.

If Quinney happened to be played by a bad or indifferent actor I am afraid "Quinneys" would be dreadful. With Frederick Ross in the part it is one of the most delicious entertainments imaginable.

Quinney is a furniture dealer. He has a wife and daughter whom he bullies most frightfully. He is loud and brusque, extremely rude, bull-headed, self-willed, kind-hearted and extremely honest in his peculiar way. His mannerisms, his gestures, his point of view are equally curious. It is a character role—a modern playwrights rarely build, because their plots steam so fast they have no time for anything but action. It is a part which would have delighted the old school of actors.

Quinney's daughter is in love with his head workman, and the old man has other ideas for her. His brother supports her in her desire to marry the man she loves and the old lady walks out of the house with the daughter, leaving Quinney still obdurate but rather nonplused. He fumes and scolds in a comical manner for three acts before he is brought to see that Jones, the Workman, is a pure gold. Antique furniture and its vagaries is wool enough mixed up with the love making.

Margaret Watson, as the mousse-like wife of Quinney who finally declares her independence, is to be credited with an excellent performance. Peggy Rush, a very pretty and attractive little girl, though by no means an accomplished actress, plays the daughter. Arthur Greenville does a fine job with a bumptious but dishonest dealer in antiques. Cecil Fletcher is a conventional juvenile, and Cathleen Nesbitt does well with a small part.

GAIETY THEATRE—"A corking good show" was the universal opinion heard on all sides yesterday afternoon and again last evening as a host of satisfied patrons passed out of the theatre. It would be difficult to imagine much improvement upon the performance of "The Great Star and Garter" show as it was presented here yesterday. They have always offered a big show but this "is the greatest ever" in every sense of the word. The stars include Don Clarke, Bert Rose, James Cassidy, Jess Weir, Ernest Stone, Richard Anderson, Willie Collins, Margaret Lee and Jacquelin Tallman. There is also a chorus which, for beauty and ability to wear the big array of costumes and the faculty of doing more than looking pretty, would be hard to beat. For the exploitation of this aggregation the Star & Garter show has secured a new musical comedy "At Saratoga Springs," written and produced by Don Clarke expressly for this organization and prepared and staged with all the lavishness of a high-priced offering and in the most pretentious theatres. Mr. Clarke, who is also the "straight" man in the show, is entitled to great credit for his efforts for there is a laugh almost every minute. Miss Margaret Lee, who is a new recruit in burlesque, is dainty in appearance and in manner and action as sweet as her name implies.

SAYS IT CLEARED HER COMPLEXION

Boston Lady Relates How Plant Juice Has Restored Her to Perfect Health.

Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, brings the sunshine of health to a poor body very much as has happened in the winter of sickness. Many local men and women who have suffered from stomach disorders and the accompanying distressing symptoms have felt the sunshine of health, as their numerous testimonials show.

Take, for instance, the case of Mrs. W. F. Smith, who resides at No. 5 Irvington Street, and is a popular Boston lady with hosts of friends, who tells how she was relieved of a bad case of stomach trouble through the use of Plant Juice. She stated:

"For six years I have suffered with stomach trouble, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia. My food fermented in my stomach and caused gas, which gave me great pain. I had no appetite, could not eat any solid food, had headaches, dizzy spells, my skin was yellow, liver was sluggish and torpid and I was so nervous I could not sleep at night and became a complete nervous wreck; had no hope of ever getting relief as I had tried so many medicines. Finally I read of Plant Juice in the home papers and started to take it. After several weeks it has built my system right up, I sleep well, liver is all right, I can eat any kind of food and it has cleared my complexion up beautifully. Plant Juice has cured me and I will gladly recommend it to others."

Plant Juice acts like magic in stomach trouble, gas, fermentation, heavy, distressed feeling after meals and on retiring. It attacks and destroys all poisons in the blood, corrects diseased conditions of the liver and kidneys and restores them to normal condition.

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Company's store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

VARIOUS BILLS

WALDRON'S CASINO—Those twin luminaries, Ed Lee Wrothe and Sliding Billy Watson, began a week's engagement last night in Hurtig's biggest show. You have to be hard to those two funny fellows. They can rock the old Casino like Lillian Webster used to rock Faneuil Hall. Each of the great comedians had an evening and you really see two shows for the price of one admission, since neither has ever appeared out before without the head of his own show. It is fifteen years ago that Bisset, Watson and Wrothe were tickling the theatregoers of the county with a similar show, "Me, Him and I," a forerunner of the musical comedy of today, and this trio held a slight pull in the affections of those who enjoyed clever comedy, buxom girls and pretty chorus work. Ed Lee Wrothe is the famous Professor Higgins, a character that stands out in burlesque as one of the foremost. In the supporting company are such well-known players as Owen Martin, one of the best straight comedy men in the business; Ethel Marmount, a stunning beauty and splendid singer; Estelle Colbert, soubrette; Hazel Woodbury, Jack Howard, Max Perlman, Al Dupont, Tommy Brooks. Mr. Hurtig has provided twenty-four girls for the chorus work and has staged the production in elaborate manner. It is a most attractive offering, and with the Waldron and Watson best, Manager Hurtig, it would seem, has put over a real winner.

EXETER STREET THEATRE—Mary Pickford is shown the first part of the week in "Madam Butterfly," a five-part Famous Players production, in the role of Cio-Cio-San, the little Japanese woman who serves as a toy for an American naval officer on a few weeks' shore leave in the Flowery Kingdom. Marguerite Clark, the charming and captivating screen favorite, will appear the latter part of the week in "The Pretty Sister of Jose."

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE—Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in George Barr McCutcheon's great story, entitled Graustark, is the principal feature for the big show here. Edward E. Rose's famous photo-play, "The Rosary," will be seen in stage play of the same name, heads the bill. This great production is in six parts and full of stirring situations and heart interest. The vaudeville program is headed by Harold and Von Kaufman, the laugh craze of the season. The other acts are The International Four, George Murphy and Rice and Franklin. Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be seen in "Pennington's Choice" the last half of the week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—An event of more than usual interest to Boston theatre-goers was the first performance on any stage of the latest play by H. Arnatian Donoly entitled "The Gates of America." Mortimer Wiseman, the eminent Scotch actor, created the principal Hebrew role. "The Gates of America" is a drama with types of characters which are recognized as true to life and has a theme that will thrill the spectators. The story of the play centres about the lives and fortunes of two girls whose father had become separated from them at Castle Garden, New York, when they had first come to this country. The father, who has in all trace of his children for years, has become a prosperous banker and they are restored to him by the aid of an Irish family, O'Connor, by an accident that forms a chapter of dramatic power unsurpassed for thrilling and absorbing interest. The different characters, Israel and his daughters, the elder O'Conner, the gentle and loving mother and the intense and energetic young Irish American, the son, are all distinctive and lovable characters. Thrilling situations follow each other in rapid sequence and there is ample comedy to relieve the tenseness of the scenes.

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE—One of the best vaudeville shows of the season was presented at this popular theatre yesterday. The headline honors were given to Niel McKinley, a popular local comedian, who kept the house in laughter throughout his original specialty. Another excellent feature was Captain Barnett & Son, two of the smallest talking lilliputians on the vaudeville stage. Others were Mr. and Mrs. LeCosta, in a comedy playlet entitled, "The Tamer." Romaih was seen in an aerial offering. Jimmy Fletcher presented an unique contortionist act. Bowers, Lewis & Norton pleased with their up-to-date talking and singing skit. The Berlin Singers offered their latest film song hit entitled "Back Home in Tennessee." New motion plays were shown together with the latest pathe news.

LOEW'S ST. JAMES THEATRE—An excellent feature picture was seen at this theatre yesterday. Cyril Scott, the noted dramatic actor, was seen in an impressive story entitled, "Not Guilty." He was supported by an excellent cast of players, and it made a deep impression on the large audience. The headline act was Julia Nash and company, in a comedy playlet entitled, "Arbitrating Lis." Ben and Hazel Mann introduced many new songs. Rhuning's animals delighted the large audiences; Johnny Scott, a popular singer, also delighted, and the Xylo Friends were seen in a classy musical offering. The Berlin Singers offered their latest song hit. Many new photo plays were shown, together with the latest Pathe News. It is advertised that Clara Kimball Young, who has just been awarded the title of "The Biggest Drawing Card" at her own contest, will make her appearance at this theatre Thursday afternoon and address the audiences. Miss Young will be delighted to meet all her many friends and admirers.

MODERN THEATRE—This theatre has for the present week's bill another of its combinations of the first-run feature films. William Fox presents Theda Bara, one of the vogue sensations, in a photo-adaptation of Bartley Campbell's famous drama, "The Galley Slave." In its new form and with this most capable screen actress, the play takes on new and more forceful interest, as the clever possibilities of the camera are utilized to the full, and the remarkable histrionic ability of Miss Bara is given full scope in the wide range of emotions which the heroine of the drama is called upon to reveal. It is a story of misconception and the cross-purposes that result from a misdirected woman's impulses, involved as she is in a chain of emotion through the perfidy of an arch-villian, whose schemes result in the consigning of her beloved to the bench of the desert French galley. The events that lead to the freeing of the prisoner and the happiness of the heroine is a series of amazing climaxes that grip and enthrall with their daring originality.

PARK THEATRE—An all-star bill, presenting the two greatest idols of the screen, Marguerite Clark, in the Paramount production, "The Prince and the Pauper," and the Metro production of Francis X. Bushman, in "The Silent Voice," was shown here. Marguerite Clark, in the dual role of the "Prince and the Pauper" reached the artistic climax of her career in her marvellous interpretation of these distinctly different, yet closely associated characters. Her exquisite artistry was never displayed to better advantage than in her sprightful enacting of the charming prince and her sympathetic portrayal of the pathetic little beggar. "The Silent Voice," in which Francis X. Bushman appears, is a picturization of the play of the same name in which Otis Skinner starred at the Liberty Theatre in New York last season. Particularly pleasing was the artistic music rendered by William P. Dodge and his symphony players. The soloist is the justly famous Margaret Gallagher, formerly Boston Opera prima donna.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE—William S. Hart, the famous portrayer of "Westerns," as produced on the motion picture screen, has a powerful and congenial role as the frontier missionary in "The Disciple," one of the big Triangle features shown here this week. The story is that of a missionary who is won from his love for a pretty woman without strength of character. Dorothy Dalton, as his wife, plays the part interestingly. The personality of the non-normal, shallow creature who is the cause of the strife and virile worthy husband for the dashy gambler type of saloon-keeper. The little daughter is charmingly played by Thelma Slater. Some of the historical scenes are what appear in "Martyrs of the Alamo," which has passed under the careful eye of D. W. Griffith, are Silent Smith, Santa Anna, Sam Houston, David Crockett, James Bowie and others well known to history. The tragedy of the fall and massacre of the Alamo defenders is lightened somewhat by the love affair between Silent Smith and an old soldier's daughter, around which the picture has been written and produced. "Her Painted Hero," one of the comedies of the Triangle bill, Hale Hamilton as the star, helps Polly Moran, playing the stage-struck girl, to realize her ambition to be in the theatrical firmament. Hamilton is the handsome matinee idol, and his attitude of Miss Moran is heightened by her attempts to win him. However, "Saved by Wireless" was another comedy which proves that the Mack Bennett method of producing Triangle plays will meet with an approval which seldom marks its way on motion picture history and novelty. There are wild fights and falls in the air, a swift auto and motor bicycle race on the land, and a rescue from a dynamited yacht in "Saved by Wireless."

"OTELLO" IS FINELY SUNG

"OTELLO" was most satisfactorily sung by the Boston Grand Opera Company last night. It was the first performance by the company of the Verdi opera, and the audience, by no means as large as it should have been—the merit of the production deserved a lover of first class opera every seat—was fervently appreciative.

"Otello" has been rendered in Boston many times in the past, but hardly ever better than last night. The production was, barring a few minor matters, superb throughout. Scenically it was most pleasing, particularly the storm scene at the start—an unexcelled spectacle.

Mme. Gerville-Reache, one of Verdi's latest works, to be one of his greatest. Some have even gone so far as to proclaim it a greater tragedy than the play of Shakespeare upon which it is modeled. The composer set the gloom and horrible tragedy to wondrous music, especially so in the orchestration—music that is at once melodious and tensely dramatic.

VILLANI A CHARMER.

The characters of course are household names. In the first act Otello arrives in Cyprus after his victories over the Turks. Then comes the drinking scene when the sward Moor disgraces Cassio to the great joy of Iago, opera's deepest dyed villian. The act closes with a love scene between the Moor and Desdemona.

In the second act Iago sows the seeds of jealousy in the Moor's mind and steals a handkerchief belonging to Desdemona. Iago sees to it that Cassio finds the handkerchief, and Otello overhears the latter boasting in its possession, whereat a little later the Moor, mad with rage and jealousy, strikes Desdemona and himself swooning.

In the final act Desdemona sings her willow song and retires. The Moor slays her, and in despair when Iago's treachery is unmasked, kills himself.

Lolva Villani had the role of Desdemona. She was new in the part to Bostonians. Early her singing lacked the full spirit of the role, but she made up for it in the last two acts and sang with plenty of charm. Her best acting was in the last act.

ZENATELLO IMPROVES.

Zenatello's conception of the insanely jealous Moor is so well known that it needs no description. His was a fine performance, filled with vigor both as to voice and gestures. As a matter of fact the tenor's voice is even better than two years ago, and that his present Otello surpasses his previous work in the role.

Baklanoff's Iago is also not new to Boston. He makes the best of his resonant voice, and in the second act he was masterful when he recited the famous "Credo", a terrible but effective piece of blasphemy, operatically considered.

Miss Leveroni has sung Emilia before, but never better. Her acting and singing leaves nothing to be desired in the part, and she is conscientious in this role as she is in all others.

The orchestra's work was well nigh flawless, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted with fine spirit.

Tonight the opera will be "La Boheme" by Mme. Pavlowa and her ballet in "Chopiniana."

CHUBERT THEATRE—"The Only Girl," a new operetta, by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, began a brief engagement here last night. Mr. Herbert himself, conducted the orchestra. There was a big audience, which was most enthusiastic. "The Only Girl" will be reviewed in detail by Frederick Johns, the critic of the AMERICAN, in Wednesday's AMERICAN.

Coming Events

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—There was a long line at the box office when the sale of seats opened for the engagement of William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes," beginning next Monday evening. It will be a treat to see Mr. Gillette on the stage again, where he has made so many friends and admirers in the past years. His return in "Sherlock Holmes" followed as it will be by a revival of "Secret Service" will be notable for all admirers of the best and most thrilling in melodramatic acting.

COLONIAL THEATRE—"The Girl Who Smiles," direct from its successful run of two hundred nights at the Longacre Theatre, will be the attraction here beginning December 6. Of all the productions this season "The Girl Who Smiles" enjoys the distinction of having the longest run to date on Broadway. Although commonly described as a musical comedy, it is much more than that.

"WITHIN LAW" AT CASTLE SQUARE

"WITHIN THE LAW," while not new to Boston, still holds its full quota of thrills and spontaneous laughter, as was illustrated at the Castle Square Theatre last night.

"A girl can't live decently on six dollars a week." This from Mary Young, as Mary Turner, in the early part of the first act, caused a large audience to sit up and take notice.

Then followed the irony of fate that makes a poor girl, innocent and without money, a common thief and turns a banker's wife, who takes goods from the "Emporium," a "cleptomanic" to be relegated to by the great Gilder himself.

"I'll get you, I'll get you," says Mary as she is dragged to her three years' imprisonment, but the merchant Gilder only repeats "An example must be made." While Mary gets the curtain calls. Thrill number two.

Four years later and the jailbird, the same Mary, after succeeding in luring old Gilder's son to marry her, meets the father face to face with:

"You took away my name and gave me a number—and now I have thrown away the number and taken your name." Thrill number three with plenty of applause.

But of course Mary, who married young Gilder for revenge, ends by truly loving him—and that suits the audience also.

But the scene in this absorbingly interesting drama which pleases the most and which sweeps the house with contagious laughter, is when Inspector Burke of the New York police is fooled and made entirely ridiculous by the crook and blackmailer, Agnes Lynch, done by Betty Harteman.

Burke the "copper" was admirably impersonated by Mr. Frederick Ormonde.

A description of the play would not be complete without mention of the Maxim silencer revolver, the fatal weapon in the last act. This is supposed to be the only one of its kind in use and fells its victim without a sound.

MISS ANGLIN PLAYS NEW COMEDY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Margaret Anglin, who spent the Summer strutting around in classic garb playing old Greek Queens in open-air theatres in California, is in Boston, just now, at the Plymouth, where she is exhibiting a very unusual and amusing comedy called "Beverly's Balance."

The play is by Paul Kester. Miss Anglin appeared in it in New York last Spring with much success, and while its theme is a bit daring to set down in cold type there is really nothing but clean, healthy fun in the play.

Beverly is a Southern girl who came to New York to study music. She is accompanied by her aunt and they both go broke. They have a cousin, a lawyer, of whom they hear great things. They decide to call upon him to borrow enough to pay their debts. They ask for $400. He is much distressed but refuses. They then come down to ten cents for carfare back up town. Again he refuses and is compelled to reveal that he is also broke and about to be turned out of his offices.

While they are consoling one another a college friend of the lawyer's comes in. He is clogged with coin and he wants a divorce. His wife sent him downtown for one and told him not to come home without it because she wishes to marry an Earl. So he needs a correspondent. It is Beverly's chance. He takes the job in consideration of a large sum of money and agrees that he shall call on her at her flat frequently until his wife's lawyer feels that she has grounds for a divorce. Of course, the legal cousin, who loves Beverly, objects noisily to the plan, but they pay no attention to him.

How Beverely succeeds in bringing husband and wife together again is the story of the play, and how she and her cousin get pelt enough to embark in matrimony.

The play is a light, airy piece and it is very high praise for Miss Anglin's versatility that she makes Beverly a very live and charming person.

Plays That Remain

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—This is the last week of the engagement of Marie Tempest, and the large audience which filled the playhouse to the doors last evening paid tribute to the charm of this brilliant comedienne.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—"Twin Beds" began its second-last week last evening. The play does not seem to have already filled out a thirteen weeks' stay, so fresh and potent continues its appeal for hearty laughter, and the announcement that it can stay but this week and next has made keener the desire to attend and partake of its delights.

WILBUR THEATRE—George V. Hobart's popular morality comedy drama, "Experience," began last night the third week of its remarkable season and the sixteenth week of its Boston engagement.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—The fiftieth performance in Boston of "The Battle Cry of Peace" last evening was marked by one of the largest audiences that has ever seen moving pictures in Boston, and it is evident that this great "preparedness" and war spectacle is getting a firm hold on the theatre-going public. Charles Richman, the well-known theatrical star, is the leading man of the production and plays the part of John Harrison, a young and patriotic American business man, who, impressed by Hudson Maxim's lecture, "Defenceless America," attempts to awaken friends and fellow citizens to our need of machinery and men for the national defence.

COLONIAL THEATRE—"Watch Your Step" began De last week of its very successful engagement last evening. Vernon Castle and Mrs. Castle, Frank Tinney and the other stars of the company have been responsible for much merriment in Boston during the last few weeks.

FRENCH WAR FILMS SHOW TROOPS AT BATTLE FRONT

Photograph of a scene in the French trenches, taken at the front and shown in the films, "Fighting for France," at the Tremont Temple.

By HARLOW HARE.

I have religiously attended all the motion picture dealing with the great war, but I never saw any pictures of the war worth the time they took to show until yesterday.

In Tremont Temple a five-reel picture entitled "Fighting for France" is being exhibited. It is announced as having been selected from the archives of the French Republic and induces films laid away to tell future generations of Frenchmen of the heroism and devotion of the men of today.

I don't hesitate to say that you can see more of the war by spending an hour and a half at Tremont Temple than if you were a war correspondent and worked your way along all the fronts.

These pictures are dramatic. They are artistic. They are grand and terrible. Former films have shown manoeuvres of small groups of soldiers, processions of artillery far from the front, such views as might have been made in time of peace as well as war. Most of the photographers appeared to have such a healthy regard for their hides that they were unable to get actually on the firing line.

These pictures are in the front of battle, and they are in such places that no unofficial photographer could possibly go. For example, our camera was present at the recent review of the French army after the great drive in Champagne. The camera man could not have been a dozen feet from King Albert of Belgium, President Poincare, General Joffre and the other high officials who reviewed the army.

The whole French army appears to be passing before the lens. Company after company, regiment after regiment, brigades, divisions and army corps appear to swing past. Nobody ever dreamed of so many soldiers. They are numberless as the blades of grass. And all in heavy fighting costume, no peace-time marshalling of crack corps. Fighting troops.

Then right into the front trenches we go, where dirt-begrimed soldiers are setting up trench torpedoes, hand grenades, and other horrible weapons for the slaughter of the Teutons, only a few yards away. We see batteries in action and we see their shells hit. These are no blank cartridges. We see something of the great drive.

PRISONERS ARE SHOWN.

And the most extraordinary spectacle of all, we see the whole army of German prisoners captured in that drive as they are being led to the rear. Captors and captives alike are covered with mud and dirt. A very long column consisting entirely of captured German officers is one of the most significant features of the film.

But not only on the German front do we see French soldiers in action. We are transported to the Dardanelles, and we see French soldiers fight the Turks. We also watch the bombardment of the shore forts and the work of French battleships. One of the most interesting of all the pictures is a view of a turret crew in the act of firing the big guns.

The curious features of the war in the East are not forgotten. One of the most beautiful pictures ever made is a camel train crossing the mountains in the early morning, and a Russian destroyer sinking one of the Turkish sailing ship is also a triumph of the photographer's art.

CZAR HELPS TROOPS.

The Cossacks in the Caucasus form the subject of another film. One of these scenes shows the Czar himself in Cossack uniform descending a hill and assisting soldiers who are climbing up the hillside carrying heavy burdens. The democracy of the Czar is a side of the character that nobody ever realized before.

Those who actually want to see slaughter and bayonet sticking will find this also in these pictures, for a capture of a German post in the Vosges shows close quarter fighting of a remarkable character.

The Boston AMERICAN does not wish to take undue credit for these pictures which it is responsible for bringing to Boston. All our readers are going to see them, and we hope they surpass anything ever taken abroad.

The first showing yesterday drew out a record crowd, and the vast auditorium of the Tremont Temple was soon comfortably full. Last night a multitude was present.

The pictures are shown under the most artistic surroundings. A big orchestra of twenty-five pieces helps out the great organ of the Temple and a very inspiring and musically musical score is performed.

Many Dead in Hurricane.

LISBON, Nov. 30.—A hurricane that struck the Portuguese coast yesterday swept inland today, causing immense damage to property and killing many persons. Reports indicate that at least ninety perished.

MISS SCHEFF SCORES HIT AT KEITH'S

Fritzi Scheff, the Viennese prima donna, was given a royal welcome by two crowded houses at B. F. Keith's Theatre, where she is appearing as the headline attraction.

Miss Scheff offers an attractive program of operatic and popular selections and was obliged to respond to several encores. The light opera star was never in better voice and scored a tremendous hit.

"Behind the Grandstand," a characteristic skit of fair ground fortune tellers, presented by Harry and Anna Sharrocks, served to introduce Miss Sharrocks in an unusual exhibition of mind reading which had her audience mystified. If there is a trick in it it was too deep for the ordinary individual to fathom.

George Bancroft and Octavia Broske appear in a medley of song hits, included in which were the Venus waits from "Oh, Oh, Delphine," "Doodle Oodle-Doo" and an Old Fashioned Cake Walk. Mr. Bancroft also gives a dramatic recitation.

The Kerville Family, trick billiardists, show something new in fancy billiard shots and juggling of billiard balls, while William Lloyd and George P. Britt are a clever pair of fun makers, both of whom sing and dance well.

Crossman's Sight Entertainers appear in an instrumental and musical offering, while Amy Butler is heard in several soprano selections.

Others on the big bill include the Ramsdells, who present the last word in modern and toe dancing; Jean Tyson, a male impersonator who also appears to advantage in Scotch songs, and Charles Hosy and Billy Lee, Hebrew comedians.

The Pathe Weekly of current news events is always a popular feature.

ITALIANS CHECK AUSTRIANS' OFFENSIVE

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

ROME, Nov. 30.—Terrible counter attacks by the Austrians and reinforcements which have arrived at Gorizia resulted in their penetrating some of the Italian trenches northwest of the fortress Sunday, the War Office admitted today.

The Italians rallied, however, and decisively checked the enemy. The Italian troops are conducting a vigorous offensive on the northern slopes of Monte San Michele, destroying Austrian trenches in furious attacks and taking more than 500 prisoners.

The following report from the Italian General Staff was issued at the War Office:

"In the Posina Valley one of our airplanes destroyed the fortress west of the Marcesina bridge and northeast of Schiderloch.

"In the Monte Moro zone we renewed our attacks on Mrzli-Vodil Sunday. After a furious encounter strong entrenchments remained in our possession. Our artillery destroyed three machine guns.

"On the heights northwest of Oslavia the enemy with large reinforcements carried out violent counter attacks and succeeded at some points in penetrating our new trenches. Later we drove him out after sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting.

"In the Carso plateau our troops have developed a vigorous offensive over the northern slopes of Monte San Michele in the direction of San Martino. They have destroyed more of the enemy's trenches, taking prisoners fifteen officers and 702 men. They also captured three machine guns and abundant war material."

REICHSTAG MAY HEAR REPORT ON FOOD

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—Public attention centred upon the Reichstag today when it reconvened in expectation that Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg would clarify the food supply situation with an extended statement, set forth the military accomplishments of the Central Powers, and possibly discuss the international relations of Germany with particular reference to the United States and the submarine issue raised by that country.

Radical Socialist members of the Reichstag had announced their intention to try to force the government to state its attitude on the question of peace, but the general opinion was that there was slight chance of any discussion of peace for several days.

HOCKEY CALL SENT OUT
LOOK FOR BUSY SEASON

DESPITE the fact that as yet weather conditions have been anything but the sort hockey enthusiasts look for, preparations are going on both among amateur clubs and the school and college teams for the season.

Already the lineup of the Arena team is pretty well known, and it is expected that within a comparatively short time the exact makeup of the B. A. A. and Harvard Club teams will be public.

Today it seems almost certain that the B. A. A. team will have Freddie Huntington and Rymie Skilton for points in the usual Art Donahue and last year's Dartmouth seven, who was recently admitted to membership in the Back Bay club, will be found. Just what the others will be is more or less a question at present.

ATHLETIC MANAGER GEORGE V. BROWN is fortunate in having two as capable players as Skilton and Huntington, handy to fill the point position. While at Dartmouth, Donahue was one of the best goal tenders in intercollegiate circles. To fill the post with the B. A. A. team he has something to shoot at when one considers the work of his immediate predecessors, "Sheeny" Canterbury and "Ollie" Chadwick were two of the best goals a Boston gathering has been privileged to look upon. Donahue to maintain the standard has his work cut out.

DOWN at New Haven Captain "Bunny" Burgess of the Yale hockey team has ordered the candidates to report tonight at the Arena in that city. Yale enters the season with several changes in view, at least during the preliminary training season. Captain Burgess intends having a larger squad to work with in the rink for a longer period each session.

Following the first call to the varsity squad the class hockey teams will be gathered for a series of games to decide the class championship. These games will in no way interefere, for with the working of the utility squad for the authorities at Yale consider that they will be helpful.

CAPTAIN BURGESS has these veterans to work with at center, D. Dickey, Jr., forward; L. M. Murray and J. L. Bierwith, defence, and H. York, goal. They will be depended to form the nucleus of a pretty good team. From the freshman team E. Gould and L. Armour, forwards, and Jacobs, defence, are rarely candidates. M. Spinney, forward, who was a wonderful defence, who were unable to play last year, should make valuable material as will Bonner, forward, who was injured early last year.

* * *

CALLS for Harvard and Dartmouth have not been issued as yet, but with the coming of ice on the Arena surface the first named team is liable to call at any time. Until there is ice at Hanover, Dartmouth will not be heard from. Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia and the other teams from that part of the country should get started shortly.

* * *

IN local interscholastic circles Newton High holds the honor of being the first school to order its sound out. For several years the Newton boys will have to be content with practice on the gymnasium floor, Captain Edgar Burkhardt has the squad, which numbers thirty-five, at work in the high school gym, shooting the puck along the polished floor. In addition to shooting the puck the squad is being trained on a course of light track work.

* * *

AS yet Fred Hoey, who handled the Arena team last season, and who is expected to resume that post this, hasn't announced any definite plans. It is known, however, that the Arena bunch will have plenty of stiff competition during the coming season.

* * *

STARTING soon after the first of the year the Arena team will get busy with strong teams in these parts as well as teams from New Haven, New York and western cities. Though a few weeks ago it looked very much as though there would be few games to come down from Canada, the indications now are that two or three at least will visit the Arena.

* * *

DR. STANTON, the well-known ecclesiastical lover of all outdoor sport, will probably make arrangements for several teams to come down from Ottawa during the year. As yet, however, there has been nothing definite decided upon by either the Arena or Canadian hockey people.

'Chick' Evans' Five Rules to Follow On the Golf Links

1.—Learn to grip the club in the fingers, never in the palm.

2.—Use enough stance for full shots, save for half and quarter shots.

Mahan to Take No Job Until He Gets His Degree

Eddie Mahan, Harvard's varsity captain, said today that he has no idea of signing a contract to coach or engage in any professional sport at the present time. The Crimson leader will not even consider offers until after graduation. He has no desire to become a professional before leaving Harvard.

At the same time Mahan admitted that he had received coaching offers from Wisconsin and several other big elevens. He stated that while there was a possibility that he might do some coaching next Fall, he would not consider the subject now.

"I probably will spend next Fall," said Mahan, "at coaching. As yet, however, I have not decided definitely. I will not enter a contract or even agree on terms, verbally, with anybody until I receive my degree at Harvard."

Tris Speaker Still Out of Fold, States Riley

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Secretary Eddie Riley of the Red Sox stated today that so far as he knew Tris Speaker had not signed a contract for 1916, though it has been reported from Cincinnati that Chairman Garry Hermann of the National Commission states that the Red Sox star has been lined up.

Nothing has been heard from the great outfielder since he left for his home in Hubbard City, Tex., a fortnight ago.

Only those who had contracts running for more than one season have been signed for 1916, according to Riley. So this Winter will be a busy one for the club in point of reaching men, submitting contracts and discussing figures on the same.

O'Donnell to Coach Johns Hopkins Team

It was reported today that Clea O'Donnell, Everett High's football coach, would coach Johns Hopkins next Fall. This is the team Charley Brickley led the past season. Friends of O'Donnell claim that the former Harvard star recommended Clea to the position and that the latter is in receipt of a lucrative offer to remove to Baltimore when the curtain goes up on the 1916 gridiron season.

Craven or Dullea to Pilot B. C. Team

Boston College will elect its 1916 football captain this week. Among the juniors eligible for the position are Tom Craven, the stocky little end, who has played on the team the last three years; Maurice Dullea, the big guard, who was a team mate of Craven's at Boston Latin and Addison.

Ertle to Meet O'Leary.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Johnny Ertle, the St. Paul lightweight, has been matched to meet Young O'Leary, the East Side 'n a ten-round bout at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, Saturday night. Johnny Marto will go against Barry Donahue or Walter Mohr in the semi-windup.

G. B. BASKETBALL SET FOR GAY SEASON

Basketball in Greater Boston is on the eve of resurrection. In all seeming fives are better organized and lovers of the sport appear destined to see plenty of sparkling matches during the Winter.

The rules committee has placed a ban on everything resembling roughness and already the A. A. U. of A. A. have asserted them.

Thus for the first time in several years, basketball will be played under uniform rules.

Among the new rules is one which allows the player to dribble the ball the entire length of the court and then shoot for a goal. In other years the player was limited to one bounce to shoot. Another new rule is that immediately following a free shot the players may shoot the free throw lane as soon as the ball strikes either the basket or the backboard. Another important change is that an opposing player is not to touch the ball after the referee has awarded it to a player out of bounds.

The rejuvenation in basketball is not confined to any city or cities and towns in the vicinity of Boston. In central Massachusetts it needed little to have been given the sport. A league has been formed, consisting of seven representative cities and towns, and has started on its schedule.

SEVEN CITIES ENTER.

The teams and their managers are: Holliston Independents, W. E. Coolidge; Company M, Milford, F. L. Maher; Shamburg Swarmins, E. K. Worcester, W. H. Holly; Northboro A. A., George J. Simpson; Southboro A. A., Fred A. Morris; Malden T. B., Christopher Ghilioni, and Framingham, Francis Malone. It is highly possible that the league will be increased to eight teams, as Natick promoters are considering the advisability of entering a five.

William Casey of Northboro, Frank Haley of Holliston, Charles Gillen of Milford and Roxie McDonald of Natick are the referees.

Locally the Shawmut Club of Roxbury is doing its utmost to revive the sport on a second basis. For the past month its team has been practicing and in its opening game, Nov. 30, will open their season tomorrow night at Ruggles Hall.

Their first opponents will be Company M five of Somerville and a fast and interesting game is expected.

SHAWMUTS GET BUSY.

Between halves the Waverlys will play the Avenue A. A. in an elimination contest to decide the championship of Roxbury. The Shawmut's lineup: Centre, Harvey; forwards, Heffron and Laughlin; guards, Murphy, Welchlin and Hurwitts. During the season the Shawmuts will play at-home games every Wednesday night.

In the West End "Bill" Cuddy has gathered together a strong five to represent St. Joseph's A. A. He will shortly announce a schedule.

Interscholastic basketball will get under way January 7. Wellesley, last year's title winners, will be back in the practically the same team.

In Roxbury and Dorchester the Page Classes are organizing fives and it is expected that two leagues, each with eight teams, will be in the field. It is expected that the same organization, which fostered the Dorchester Catholic League in baseball, will be represented on the court. There are a number of good basketball players holding membership in Dorchester Catholic clubs and a strong league could easily be formed.

Basketball Notes

MANAGER PHILIP LEADER of the Penno A. C. reports that there are only a few open dates left on the schedule, and that the other managers had best get busy.

THE Pennos play at home on Tuesday nights. Otherwise, any night in the week suits them. Leader's address is No. 257 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury.

THE Machine Gun Company, Fifth Regiment Infantry, M. V. M., seeks games with fifth class basketball teams for Saturday nights, away from home; expenses expected for seven men. Address Assistant Manager Flores, State Armory, Winthrop, or phone Winthrop 215-W in evening.

THE St. Mary's of Charlestown want games with teams in the 125-pound class; expenses taken and given. At home Wednesday and Friday night. Address Manager John H. Horan, Jr., No. 57 Mt. Vernon street, Charlestown.

THE Cambridge Red Sox leave Thursday for a short trip through States. Games have been booked with the Augusta A. A. Augusta Friday night and Bangor A. A. at Bangor Saturday night.

MANAGER JIMMY DAILEY will take this squad: Kennedy, Mitchell, Nee, Murph, and MacDonald. Dailey will be badly disappointed if the five does not bag both games.

THE L. Ninth Regiment, seeks games at home for Thursday nights; road-following games for all other nights. Capt. John F. O'Brien, Lale Armory, Natick.

THE Greater Boston A. A. has reorganized for the season. Sullivan, Somerville former star, will captain the five and is positive he will put a winner on the courts.

A. H. BATES is the manager. He can be reached at No. 19 Myrtle street; phone Haymarket 22011.

Tiger and Dillon Again.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Jim Flynn, the Pueblo Plasher, and Jack Dillon of Indianapolis clash at the Broadway Sporting Club, in Brooklyn, tonight.

"The Rabbits" Column

by Walter J. Mcgarraville
SHORTSTOP of the BRAVES

"Lefty" Baumgartner of the Phillies has the right idea. I notice he intends to work out in the gym so that he may report to Manager Moran in condition. That is as it should be. The time this Spring of training is likely to be shortened by all the clubs, which makes it imperative for players to get in shape physically when they go South for practice. Practice is all that any player should require.

* * *

We have a "Lefty" in our club—Tyler. He is living on a fine farm up in New Hampshire, and with the work on the place he quotes me as "early to bed and early to rise," I look to see George in the pink of condition when we assemble at Miami.

* * *

Major league clubs at the present time have many players on their lists who may never see active training even. Take the Yankees, for instance. The list shows forty-seven names. The rule requires that by twenty-five by May 15, there is sure to be some slashing at an early date. Carrying from forty players seems to me to be a condition which operates against the minor leagues. Quite a number of players have been held back in their development by simply being carried around by a major league club, with little if any chance to get into the game regularly. Development of ball players comes through playing ball, not watching it played from bench warming positions.

* * *

I have listened to many a player of this type whose heart was in his work, and they all would have preferred to be playing in a minor league club in preference to being used occasionally. Every ball player has an eye on the big leagues. It is his ambition to play there—not sit around. Only nine men work for a club at any one time and men have to be carried for emergencies. The rule of cutting down to twenty-five men is fine for the game and a good thing for the young players. They will get a chance to show, and by their work will soon be over world-eye of managers and owners.

* * *

I note that the experts in picking All-Eastern football teams chose Mahan. How could they miss him? It would have been like baseball experts failing to choose Ty Cobb as a star outfielder.

* * *

"Chief" Bender must have had a decided off day at the traps. I remember listening to George Stallings tell of Bender's shooting down on the meadows at Haddock. Boss George said that he saw his guest shoot better than this Indian.

* * *

They tell this story of Bender when he was a youngster and in the wild woods: He was given a certain number of cartridges, being required to bring back something for each bullet, which he did.

* * *

As the Yankees are to train at Macon, Ga., I wish to remark that Manager Donovan will find the people there very hospitable, the hotel fine, and the boys will have a real little park to work out on. The Braves built a championship team there, so watch the "Yanks."

* * *

Yes, I got my letter from President Gaffney, and you can bet I'll be in the game unless injured, all the time. Absence of a regular hurts the whole team's chances for victory, and that is what we are looking for.

* * *

So Jimmy Callahan didn't go to Los Angeles after all. I had an idea that something would happen to spoil that story. It didn't sound good to me.

BRAVES' HOME AT MIAMI TO BE UP TO DATE

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Down in Miami, Fla., they are calling the new park now under construction for the use of the Braves in Spring training, "Little Braves' Field," and they appear very proud of the distinction this visit of the former champions has given that little town.

Work upon the grandstand began Monday, while Groundkeeper Shaner has been there some time looking after the grading necessary, being assisted by Charles G. Hancock, a Forest Hill fan. Reports from the camp state that there will be plenty of playing space. The grandstand when completed will seat 6,000 persons.

The stand is to be semi-circular in form, with the clubhouse, showers, etc., underneath. The squad of Braves will be quartered at the Gralquin Hotel, which is reported as being up-to-date in every respect.

SIGNED FIVE-YEAR CONTRACT.

When it is understood that the Braves have contracted to use Miami for a training camp for five years, all the enthusiasm attendant is explained.

The second annual regatta on Biscayne Bay is slated for the middle of February, and there is an effort on foot to have the Braves arrive for that period though it is doubtful, under the idea expressed of shortening the training trip if this is pulled off.

Carl Fisher, who is staging the motor-boat races, has closed with Johnny Aitken, driver of one of Fisher's Peugeots, to come to Miami and give daily exhibitions on Atlantic Boulevard, at the beach.

FLORIDA A BUSY SPOT.

Efforts are being made by the Key West Board of Trade, which is 156 miles south of Miami, to secure the Chicago Cubs for training camp, only seventy-six miles north of Miami, is after a major league club to train there, but that part of the world is likely to be very busy in baseball information this coming Spring.

President James E. Gaffney and his family, and Director R. H. Davis, will be visitors at the camp throughout the stay of the team.

Monday was to have been moving day for the "World's Champions" office force, but owing to a hitch in the installation of the phones, it was decided not to transfer the office material until tomorrow.

Secretary Eddie Riley was busy yesterday making ready for the getaway to the new location at Arlington Court, where a store and the ground floor of the building will be used.

Quentin Roosevelt to Lead 'Freshies'

Quentin Roosevelt, youngest son of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, has been appointed manager of Harvard's freshman football eleven. The interclass series starts tomorrow. The team captains are: Freshmen, V. E. Klopsophomores, Murry Taylor; juniors, L. P. Jacobs, seniors, G. G. Haydock.

Young Roosevelt received his appointment from Eddie Mahan, captain of the Crimson's varsity eleven, as a reward for all the interest he has shown in football affairs at Cambridge.

Harvard Soccerites Cannot Play Tigers

The Harvard A. A. wont permit the Crimson's soccer team, which plays Pennsylvania Saturday and Haverford Monday, to stop over and play in Princeton next Tuesday. The Tigers played three ineligible players in their first contest with Harvard and the game was thrown out.

The Harvard freshman team plays Moses Brown School at Providence Saturday.

Felton Drops Game to Brooklyn Star

George Felton, Boston's brilliant entrant in the Interstate Three-Cushion League, after experiencing a run of splendid fortune, lost to Charles Otis of Brooklyn in their tilt at Litchfield's last night, 50-42.

Felton played some excellent billiards at times, but his game was not anywhere as steady as that put up by Otis. A run of five by Felton featured the match.

GILMAN LIKELY TO LEAD THE CRIMSON

Now that college football is over the next item of interest is in the selection of captains for Harvard and Yale for 1916.

The Crimson will choose their leader probably on Friday. The selection points to J. A. Gilman, almost unanimous choice for All-American tackle. "Dick" Harte, Hal Dadmun and Charley Coolidge are also mentioned as possibilities.

Langford Arrested on Assault Charge

Charges of assault and battery brought against him by his wife, Martha J. Langford, caused the arrest of Sam Langford, the colored boxer, on Forest street, near Lenox street, Roxbury. Langford was bailed in $200 shortly after his arrest. His wife charges that he beat her when they met on Tremont street, near Camden street, on November 21.

Coffey Stops Gunner in the Fourth Round

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant, knocked Gunboat Smith out in four rounds last night, and as a result the latter no longer is considered as a possibility against Jess Willard. Tom Jones, Willard's manager, watched the scrap and this morning declared that Smith was out of consideration.

Neyland, West Point Star, Able to Go Out

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Bob Neyland, star West Point baseball pitcher and football end, who suffered a concussion of the brain in the Army-Navy game Saturday, has improved enough to go out.

BOXING BRIEFS and GOSSIP

ATLAS A. A. CARD.

Ted (Kid) Lewis of England vs. Mike Glover of South Boston; twelve rounds.
George Algar vs. Charley Ward; eight rounds.
Joe White vs. Young Jasper, eight rounds.
Sammy Sims vs. Teddy Murphy; eight rounds.
Referees—Phil Powers and Moffitt Flaherty.
Starting time—8 o'clock.

THE boxing scene shifts to the Hippodrome after tonight's Lewis-Glover frolic at the Arena. For the opening at the new spot, a week hence, Middleweights Jeff Smith and George Chip will have it out.

CHARLEY WHITE and Ted Lewis have put about all the Class A Boston boxers out of business. Now Glover alone remains unless Baldwin, Gallant et al are fortunate enough to pull come-backs.

GLOVER, it is claimed, has trained faithfully for tonight's encounter with Lewis. He avers that he has kept clear of booze on Ted in all his Boston starts and that he is confident the Londoner will be easy picking for him. Whoop-la!

A GLOVER victory tonight would set the "house" wild. It would also be the big upset of the year, as the indications are that ringside betting will be at least 1 to 4 if there's any at all other than Mike surviving the distance.

NOW Dan Morgan is busy exploiting "Battling" Levinsky. In his last bit of bunk he says that Jess Willard is a false alarm and a lot of additional like whangtoodle stuff.

"TWIN" MIKE SULLIVAN is back in training, working out daily at Nantasket, a plunge in the surf—br-r-r-h!—being included in his daily stunts. He bravely states that in thirty days' time he will be willing to mingle with the wickedest welters living.

REACHES Boston from Toledo, O., a heavy, Jack Hart by name, height 6 feet 2¾ inches, who wants to start scrapping with somebody. Jess Willard or Frank Moran preferred.

JACK MANN of Chelsea, is out with a defi to all New England bantamweights on behalf of "Kid" Lee. Mann will let Al Delmont come in at 122 pounds for a scrap with Lee.

NEW YORK Nov. 30.—Percy Lawrence, who with Willie Hanley of San Francisco, won the Chicago six day bicycle race which finished last Thursday night, has been signed by the management of the six-day race at Madison Square Garden and will be seen in the coming grind, December 6 to 11. This will be the fifth time Lawrence has appeared in the Garden race.

The field should be better balanced than ever before, because the management decided, to step up the riders individually and then select partners by lot. This will do away with a few of the star pairs having the race at their mercy, barring accidents, from the very start.

The big feature of the sprint program is a twenty-five mile motor-paced event, with the four leading pace followers in the world entered. These are Walthour, Carmen, Wiley and Linart.

De Paul Coming to Beverly 20 Strong

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—The De Paul Academy eleven, twenty strong and in charge of the Rev. T. P. Girnan and Coach Joseph Paupa, leaves for Beverly, Mass., Thursday, where it plays Beverly High in a post-season battle Saturday. De Paul won the Chicago Catholic League championship and its one defeat during the past season was dealt by Englewood High, champions of the Public High School League, 14 to 6.

De Paul's record for the campaign is 193 points against their opponents' twenty. The eleven, while a trifle undersized, is very fast and full of tricks.

Wenck to Head Commission.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The reorganized New York State Athletic Commission has elected Fred A. Wenck chairman and William F. Mathewson secretary.

Different in taste!

You'll find Camels delightful and enticing to your taste. The blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos attends to that!

You'll prefer the Camel blended flavor to either kind of tobacco smoked straight.

You may smoke Camels liberally—

Because they will not bite your tongue or parch your throat!

Because they leave no unpleasant cigarette after-taste!

Because they do not tire your taste!

Quality—no premiums!

The stamp placed over and seals the package, which keeps out air, thereby preserving the quality of the blended tobaccos. By inserting the fingers as illustrated, the stamp easily tears without tearing the tin foil, which folds back into its place.

Camels are sold everywhere in scientifically sealed packages, 20 for 10c; or 10 packages (200 cigarettes) in a glassine-covered carton for $1.00. We strongly recommend this carton for the home or office supply or when you travel.

The Wonderful Adventures of the Sunshine Family in the Land of Make-Believe

Copyright, 1913, New England Newspaper Publishing Company

By GEORGE WASHINGTON SUNSHINE.

I ASKED old King Cole, this morning, how he was moving furniture (he's in the city now).

"Well" said the merry old soul, "I enj[oy it].

"But are you making any money out of it?"

"I hadn't thought of THAT," he said, "but certainly I was saving all the nickels and dimes I USED to squander in other people's cabarets. Now that you mention it, however, I don't believe the public has really begun to [realize] they'll probably come a little better when they see what I am doing too."

"And [so]

"I am doing a one performance free to all [citizens] of the Land of Make-Believe.

"And the [reason] I said [enjoy]ment was Your Majesty, the little Dutch Cheese Maid, who has begun to [melt] this. Ho! Ho!" Shucks Your Highness, the bluebird would [have] to pay me half 1 per cent of the [profits]

"Whew!" cried [Queen] Belle. "Not so fast, G[eorge]. That's a nice slip of the tongue. I [must] ask the POOH [Corner] in the Land of Make-Believe.

"The POOH dolls said I We'll that IS a good one. Who ever heard of a [good]

King Cole [began] to [get] ready to [go] for fully a minute. It was [looking] me over, up and down, [in]- and through, quite as if I were some sort of a [curiosity] and not. Then he said slowly:

"George Washington Sunshine, they tell me you write for a great newspaper up to [New York], and therefore taken it for granted that you are a person of [some] sense, a man who knows a [thing] or two, and now you [affect] to [be something] funny, [some]thing [ridiculous] statement that [you] made [about] dolls.

"Sunshine, didn't you ever hear of a RAG doll?

"I certainly did," I said, "but ——"

"And did you suppose that a rag doll is a rag doll because it WANTS to be a rag doll? Bah-air-rae, bah! A rag doll means poverty.

"But" I said, "I know some of the richest and best-dressed little girls in all the Truly-Truly Land of Real People and many of them have rag dolls and, in some cases, appear to love their rag dolls more than their china dolls: more, even, than their French dolls."

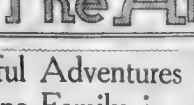
"Who and what is [this] about the Little MOTHERS of the rag dolls?" demanded Old King Cole. "Certainly I did not. I know of the rag dolls THEMSELVES all right, but THEY are poor. Don't you suppose that a rag doll, if she had HER choice, would don silks and satins and wear [jewels] like a French dolls do? You bet you [life]! I know!

"So, at the matinee this afternoon, I am playing host to all the rag dolls of the Land of Make-Believe. And there are quite a number of them, even here in the Land of Make-Believe. The fact is, the matter is that there appears to be little demand for them. Santa Claus, as good as He is, seldom finds a home in the United States for a rag doll. And so, while the fashionable dolls go out [riding], mas time to good [homes] Little Mothers all over [the] the poor, poor rag [dolls] year [after] year and [are] fashionable, with each season.

"And they are such good-hearted little dolls, too. My heart grieves for them [when] I [see] [them] [lying] [around] [in] [the] [toy] [shops] [of] [the] [city] [with] [the] [other] [dolls]. [They] [look] [so] [sad] [and] [lonesome] [and] [neglected] [that] [I] [feel] [like] [crying] [myself]. [I] [don't] [suppose] [you] [have] [ever] [noticed] [it]?"



"No," I [said], "I [didn't] [notice] [it]. [But] [certainly] [I] [was] [saving] [all] [the] [nickels] [and] [dimes] [I] [USED] [to] [squander] [in] [other] [people's] [cabarets]. [Now] [that] [you] [mention] [it], however, I don't believe the public has really begun to [realize] it. They'll probably come a little better when they see what I am doing too."

"And [so]

"I am doing a one performance free to all [citizens] of the Land of Make-Believe.

Opposed to 'Movies' Near Public Schools

The school committee has voted unanimously to oppose the granting of licenses for motion picture houses in the immediate vicinity of school buildings.

The stand is taken as the result of a protest made to the board by the Rev. Michael J. Cuddihy of St. Margaret's Church, Columbia road, Dorchester, against a proposed theatre near the Harbor View street school.

A hearing on the petition of the owners of the theatre for a license to give motion picture performances is to be held Friday afternoon before Mayor Curley, and the school committee decided officially to oppose its granting at that time.

Bishop Allows Episcopal Rite for Divorcee

Bishop William Lawrence of the Episcopal Church has given formal permission for the marriage, Saturday afternoon, of the Barton Mansion on Massapoag street, Sharon, of Mrs. Annie Brownell, a divorcee, and George Webster, a Boston salesman.

Mrs. Brownell secured a divorce some time ago, and the Rev. Mr. Forster explained:

"The divorce was on statutory grounds, and Mrs. Brownell was the innocent party. Bishop Lawrence of Boston accordingly gave permission for her re-marriage."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened a little lower in New York as a rule with the majority of active issues more favorable of a number were unchanged and a few advanced. The price range was very narrow and the market quiet. Alaska Gold was active and weak both in New York and Boston. It opened at 24¾, in the former market and soon sold below 24. It began in Boston at 24¾ and weakened further here. There was no change in the trading attitude. Attendance at exercises in house was light.

EARLY CHANGES IN PRICES.

At 10:15 in New York declines included Allis-Chalmers ⅝, American Can ¼, American Smelting ⅝, Lackawanna Steel ⅝, American Locomotive ⅝, Colorado Fuel ⅛, Distillers ⅛, Goodrich ⅛, Lehigh Valley ½, New York Central ⅛, New Haven ¼, Pennsylvania ⅛, Reading ⅝, Southern Pacific, ex-dividend, ⅝, and Union Pacific ¼.

Among gains were Baltimore & Ohio ⅛, and Northern Pacific ⅛.

Issues that were unchanged included U. S. Steel, Utah Copper, Inspiration, Baldwin, Crucible Steel, Westinghouse, Maxwell, Canadian Pacific and Erie. Canadian Pacific sold ex-dividend.

The market acted as if inert. American Tobacco was freely offered, declining four points to 217, and later in the first hour Baldwin sagged a point. The early show of strength made by Union Pacific brought out considerable of that stock, and it eased off quickly. There was little support in any group under selling pressure.

BOSTON MARKET BEGAN QUIET.

There was not much business in the Boston market at the beginning, although it became fairly active near the end of the first hour. It grew weaker when bunker awhile coppers were irregular, but they took a downward course. There was not much trading outside of Alaska. Alaska Gold and sluce, Shattuck-Arizona were prominent and declined more than a point after making a small gain.

At 10:15 gains included Sluce Mayflower ¼, and North Lake ⅛. Among declines at that time were Alaska Gold ⅜, Calumet & Arizona ¼, Lake ⅜, St. Mary's ⅛, Mohawk ¼, U. S. Smelting ¼, Ventura Oil ⅜ and Atlantic Gulf preferred ¼. When American Zinc opened it was off half a point, while Butte & Superior was off a fraction. It rallied and retained.

Demand for copper, spelter and lead has slackened, it is reported. Prices remain steady, however.

RALLY IN NEW YORK.

Towards the end of the first hour there was slight improvement in New York, Texas Gulf advancing 6 points to 215 on a few transactions. U. S. Steel, American Sugar, Westinghouse, Baldwin, New Haven, Anaconda Copco, Reed Sugar, Distillers, Crucible and Mexican Petroleum all selling higher.

Loew's Boston Theatres Associates

Authorized Capital $1,500,000 — Issued $1,335,000

TRUSTEES.

Marcus Loew	George H. Earle, Jr.	M. Douglas Flattery
President, Loew's Circuit of Theatres, 1560 Broadway, New York City.	President Real Estate Trust Company, Philadelphia, Pa.	Resident Director, Boston Mass.

This stock is non-taxable, and based on past earnings should pay from 10% to 15% on the investment.

The above Company is the owner of all of the capital stock of the Corporations which lease and manage the Orpheum, St. James and Globe Theatre of Boston.

The new Orpheum is now nearing completion and will be opened probably about January 1st. The architects are the most experienced theatre architects in the world, and they state that this Theatre will be the finest in the United States. Anyhow, no expense has been spared to make it a building that Boston will be proud of. It will accommodate over 3400, with only one balcony. The old Orpheum seated about 2000 with three balconies, and it was probably the most prosperous and successful theatre in the world. During the five years that it has been under the present management it has been open all Summer and Winter, with the exception of five weeks, during that period never failed to make substantial weekly profits. Those were weeks when the mercury and humidity broke records.

The increased capacity will make possible better and bigger shows than ever before.

It costs no more to entertain 3400 than 2000, therefore all increased patronage means net increase of profits.

The old Orpheum turned away hundreds of thousands of people; the New Orpheum will probably turn away thousands also; but it can handle larger crowds than the old building, and the patrons will be more comfortable in every way and find all modern conveniences at their service.

Old patrons are now given an opportunity to become partners in the business.

Ten thousand shares of stock, par value $10 each, will be distributed by the following bankers and brokers, who are acting as agents of the syndicate, at $12 per share. Preference will be given to small subscribers. The right is reserved to reject any or all subscriptions.

20 now being installed in new Niles Building restaurant, School St., Boston.

The demand for these chairs exceeds the supply. To meet this demand, the H. B. Ruggles Co. is offering an issue of 8% cumulative preferred stock, participating equally with the common stock after the latter has received 8%.

Earnings at present are more than double the preferred dividend requirements. The preferred stock will doubtless earn and pay much more than 8% per annum.

Find No Poison in Davis Girl Tragedy

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 30.—Dr. E. B. Fish of the State Laboratory today reported to Medical Examiner F. M. Brazil that he failed to find any trace of poison in the stomach of Miss Gertrude Irene Davis, the nineteen-year-old native of Georgiaville, whose death baffled the authorities until caused Brazil to suspect foul play. Dr. Brazil will ascribe Brights disease as the cause of death.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRIGON.

The owners of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, who participated in the celebration party yesterday, had the pleasure of seeing themselves reproduced in the moving pictures at Keith's Theatre in the afternoon.

C. B. Henshaw, distributor of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, is nothing if not enterprising and a live wire, and not only did he put over something new in the parading of his cars, but he also showed a new stunt in having them photographed so that they reproduced in the movies the very same.

General Advertising Manager George H. Phelps of the company stamped this feat of Mr. Henshaw's and the best one known, and expressed the opinion that it could not be duplicated in any other section of the country.

At a recent conference of Studebaker officials, plans were set on foot that will make the Studebaker Company the world's largest builders of commercial as well as pleasure vehicles, and it will not be at all surprising if this company produces at least 100,000 motor cars in 1916.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

The Movies Have Become a "Fifth Estate"

They Have Just Made Possible the Greatest Patriotic Loan the World Has Ever Seen

THE French war loan which has just been completed is the most tremendous financial transaction the world has ever known. Its success was far beyond expectation or belief in the possible. It has astounded the financial experts of the world and given another decisive proof of the wonderful and unsuspected virility and power of the French nation.

But the extraordinary success of this loan is attributable not only to the financial power and patriotism of the French people, but to the intelligence with which the French government promoted their plans, and the success of their promotion is attributable also to the rise of a power in our civilization which has existed but a few years.

The French government utilized in the negotiation of this unparalleled loan the moving picture films displayed with the ordinary picture shows throughout France. The effect of this kind of publicity campaign was wonderful. The great audiences were gathered in the countless theatres for pleasure, and their patriotism stirred by appeals upon the film which were interpolated amidst their amusements.

This is the climax of service by that great industry has now become the third largest industry in America.

The moving pictures have satisfied our appetite for pleasure, have quickened our curiosity for knowledge. Today they are rendering extraordinary service in awakening the American people to the need of adequate military defence by such exhibitions as "Fighting for France" and "The Battle Cry of Peace," and in France they have just accomplished a great act of patriotism which history may perhaps record as one of the contributing causes of the salvation of a great people.

Last week the teachers of Massachusetts assembled in convention and there adopted, rather hastily, a resolution condemning any but EDUCATIONAL moving pictures. It was a short-sighted, ill-considered action. If moving picture films contained ONLY educational matter the audiences and their response would have been very slight in the great French appeal for money.

In the struggle for perfection "May too much zeal be had. The worst of madmen is a saint run mad." We must keep the moving picture films clean and wholesome, but we must not discriminate against them. We must not seek to do those things against them which would tend to make them unpopular, for their power for good is in their popularity, and their popularity would make our efforts vain against them in any event.

What Life Means to Many Children

Responsibility, Hard Work, Sorrow. Think of THEM if You Are Inclined to Be Discontented

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

This child's mother is at work in some sweatshop or mill erected as a monument to our improved "civilized industries."

That mother goes back to her work usually about forty-eight hours after each child is born. No nursing of the child, of course.

The care of the younger children falls upon the girl that has the misfortune to be the oldest.

This picture, sketched from life by Mary Ellen Sigsbee in the richest city of the richest country in the world, will more strikingly reveal our real degree of civilization in ages to come than all the fine monuments and all the proud modern boasting of those that are prosperous.

A "civilization" that looks on indifferent while children and mothers suffer is simply another stage of barbarism.

A "civilization" that permits men to exploit children and their mothers for profit, turning their health and their lives into dollars, is simply cabalistic cannibalism.

It makes little difference whether you eat the body of a child, chewing the actual flesh with your teeth, or eat food BOUGHT with money that represents the child's life.

The child in this picture would be happier dead, and there are hundreds of thousands like her.

At an age when she should know only happiness, cheerfulness and affection she has all the heavy responsibility, the tears and the worry of motherhood, with none of motherhood happiness.

It is not a pleasant picture, but it is a picture of REAL life—one that explains why it is possible for what we call civilization to turn suddenly into brutal slaughter, as in Europe. A race capable of indifference to such suffering as this naturally has within it all the brutality that war reveals.

This picture is offered as a comment on what we call our "civilization." Thousands of public servants are paid tens of millions of dollars annually to protect "the public welfare," and not one of them has a thought for this child—for she is "at home."

If you are discontented with life and think your lot unfortunate, it may do you good to look at this picture.

There are thousands of little children, of whom this picture is typical, and to whom, having so little, a very little means so much. A Christmas basket sent to the home of such a child is worth more than the gift of a thousand dollars to a family of ordinary means. Will you help the AMERICAN send such a basket to such a home?

THE SORROWFUL LITTLE MOTHER

Of such children there are tens of thousands, careworn before they are half grown, pitiful and devoted child-mothers, whose hard lot deprives them in youth of the strength that would have made a strong mother later. (See Editorial.)

The Tapestry

By Jane McLean

THE master workman wrought a tapestry
Of luminous threads. Full beautiful it grew.
The salty grayness of a heaving sea
Was in its folds, and Heaven's own azure blue
Was woven through it. Here there gleamed the red
Of swirling branches, here the first faint hint
Of April's violet eyes, and here the dead
White moon's cold pallor. Time passed, nor did stint
His aid, for Grief was in it. Song the fugitive
And laughing Joy and Love and Life, and all
That Hope and Faith and Charity can give
Bloomed into radiance at the master's call.
At last the work was finished, yet the light
Was missing, and the master paused and thought
Till One with glorious eyes came through the night
And whispered, softly, "I am he you sought."
The master sighed and wiped away a tear,
Then wove the last forgotten strand in place,
And as his work leaped into colors clear
He turned to look Death calmly in the face.

Christmas Cheer at Home

By Dr. A. A. Berle

NEVER perhaps in the history of the world has the solidarity of mankind been so clearly demonstrated as in the magnificent outburst of benevolence in all neutral lands, especially in our own, in providing for the sorrow-stricken war sufferers in the warring nations of Europe. True Christians in this matter have not known nationalities, only humanity. It has made little difference whether the burdened souls were Belgians, French, English, Poles or Germans. Shot and shell produce devastation wherever their deadly work is done. And the response has been magnificent.

* * *

But there is a radiance about charity when the subjects of it are far off, which is wanting when they are near at hand. Distant charities, especially war charities, have a glamour because of their perspective and picturesqueness. Nearby charity often lacks both! Charity in the distance, with well-known names as sponsors, and great bankers as treasurers, often has a dress parade aspect, while charity among the poor and stricken at home is like the unpleasing and ugly work of the trenches. Yet the trench warfare is the real thing! Real benevolence shows its strength when it does not need picturesque surroundings or dazzling features. It thus often happens that it is easier to raise thousands for a distant object than it is to raise hundreds for one near at home.

* * *

St. Paul, the ablest of the early teachers of Christianity, saw this very clearly, and in connection with it he uses a word which is very sparingly used in the New Testament. Well knowing that it was humanly easier to respond to some appeal that had lots of color, than to one of the drab home variety, he wrote: But if any provideth not for his own and especially for his own household he hath denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever. The old version had infidel instead of unbeliever.

Already many people are simply substituting foreign charity for home charity! This ought not to be, and it will be a mistake of our benevolence if we simply take what we would otherwise give to our own poor and needy fellow countrymen and send it abroad. Not that we should do less for the starving millions abroad! But in so doing we should not forget those of our own communities whose needs are not less or their sufferings less keen. There are multitudes in our own land who will pass a miserable Christmas season under the best that will be done for them. Their sufferings will only be enlarged when they read of the thousands sent abroad while they are forgotten at home.

Ask the treasurer of any local charitable organization and he will tell you that the gifts to his society have appreciably diminished since the foreign appeals began. This is simply robbing Peter to pay Paul, and is neither charity nor Christianity. By all means let us make the starving millions abroad as comfortable as it is in our power to make them. But let it not be at the expense of our own poor neighbors and fellow citizens, who, by reason of poverty, lack of work, misfortune or other causes, are either actually or on the brink of suffering. Many years' experience have convinced me that this is no fanciful matter.

After all is said and done, America is our HOME and our fellow citizens of every nation, color and creed are our fellow Americans. Let us not be gazing with such rapt interest upon the startling and heart-rending scenes abroad that we are deaf to the cries of sorrow and distress at home.

Wireless Triumphs Presage More Startling Facts

By Garrett P. Serviss

AS a beginning of fulfilment of prophecy nothing could be more startling than the wireless conversations held the other day between Arlington, near Washington, and Mare Island, near San Francisco, when the "winged words" flew clear across the continent, through the crisp Autumn air, over rivers, lakes, prairies and mountains, a tremendous leap of 2,500 miles, a good tenth of the circumference of the earth. The prophet who predicted this seventeen years ago was Professor Ayrton, an Englishman, and his words are remarkable.

"We are coming," said he, "within thinking distance of a time when if a person wants to call a friend he knows not where he will call in a loud electro-magnetic voice, heard by him who has the electro-magnetic ear, silent to him who has it not. 'Where are you?' he will ask. A small reply will come, 'I am at the bottom of a coal mine,' or 'crossing the ...ndes,' or 'in the middle of the Pacific,' or, perhaps, in spite of all the calling, no reply will come, and the man will know that his friend is dead."

The recent experiments were a strict fulfilment of the first part of this prophecy. The man with the "electro-magnetic voice" was on the Atlantic shore of America, the man with the "electro-magnetic ear" was on the Pacific shore. The former spoke and the latter heard him, but not possessing, yet, the electro-magnetic voice, could only respond by telegraph. When the system is perfected, and both voice and ear are in possession of each person, Professor Ayrton's prophetic dream will be completely realized.

If there had been someone with the magic ear on the highest summit of the Rocky Mountains he might have heard the words transmitted across the continent. If he had been in the midst of a prairie, or at the bottom of a canyon, or deep in a mine he might have heard them. They would have passed over the sea as easily as over the land, so that a ship's captain, or a passenger in the middle of the Atlantic, sailing through sunshine or storm, might also have heard them.

The prophecy speaks of a man calling to a friend of whose location on the globe he is ignorant. That emphasizes the peculiar difference between ordinary and wireless telephony (the same difference existing between ordinary and wireless telegraphy). When you use a common telephone your voice is transmitted by means of a fixed electric wire to a definite place. But when you speak with the free "electro-magnetic voice" it is heard on all sides, wherever corresponding "electro-magnetic ears" exist.

It spreads round the earth, as the sound of a dinner horn reaches the laborers in the fields over the entire area of a farm. But just as the housewife in blowing the horn turns east and west and north and south, so that the sound waves may be sent clearly in each direction, so the electro-magnetic waves are capable of a certain amount of guidance, and may be concentrated, more or less, in a chosen direction.

And, as special conditions of the atmosphere and intervening obstacles on the ground interfere with the conveyance of sound waves, so the electro-magnetic waves are affected by special conditions of the medium through which they pass.

The man of science is no Mother Shipton. He makes no random prophecies, but undertakes to foretell only things which appear to him to be inevitable consequences of already established facts. Yet, in view of what has now been accomplished, it would seem not at all a rash prediction to aver that, before many years have passed, it will be virtually impossible for anybody to be lost, anywhere on the earth, in the manner in which explorers have been lost in past times.

A man caught by stress of weather at the North Pole, or drifting off on an Arctic ice-floe, if only he has the electro-magnetic voice, may call for help, and his call will be heard and answered. But, in truth, that is no more than Professor Ayrton's remarkable scientific prophecy has already pointed out.
